Bloodmobile In Burnsville; Today's Goal Is 100 Pints

"Today is the day," says Mrs. Alma Holcombe of Burnsville, "when you can give to the Red Cross that priceless gift of a pint of your blood which will help relieve the suffering, even prolong the life of some Yancey Countian."

"This person who receives your blood may be a close friend, a neighbor or a beloved member of your family. The life you save may even be your very own," she said.

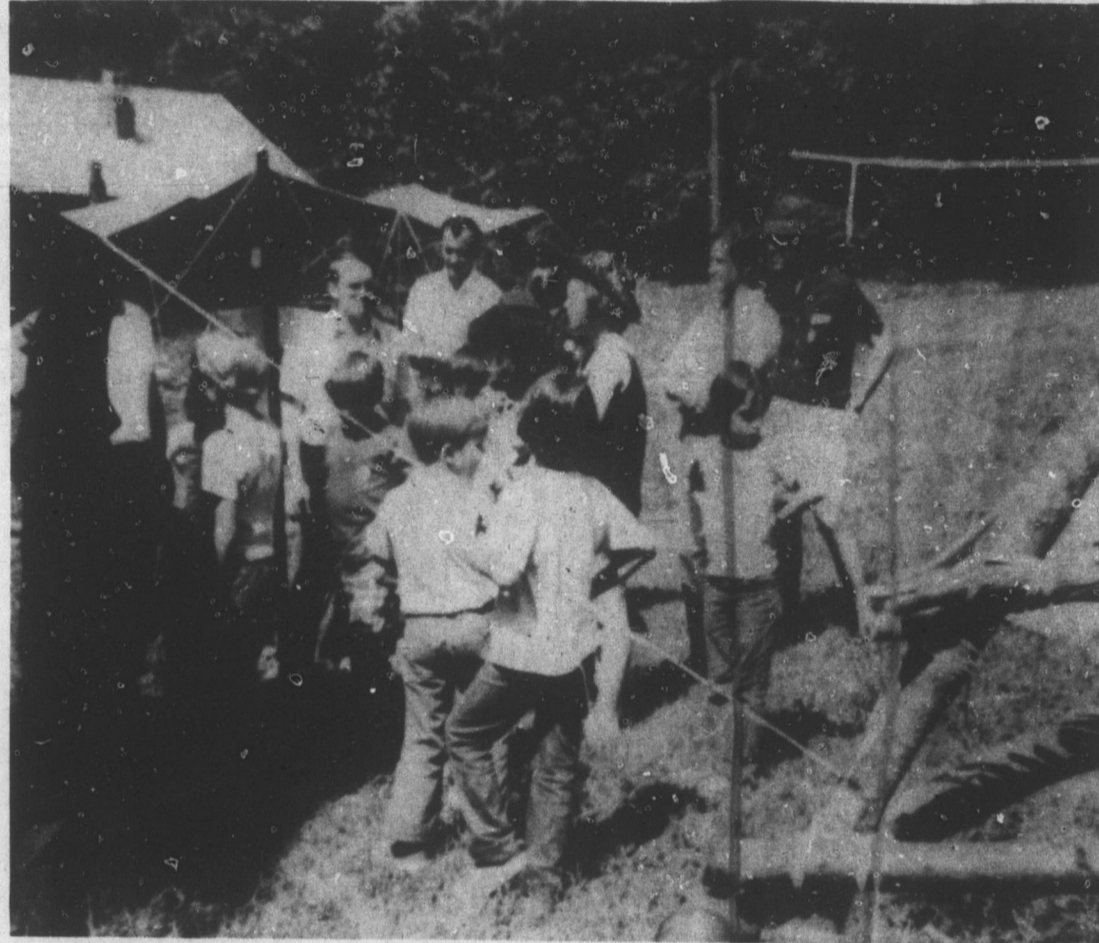

"Yes," says Mrs. Holcombe, "today (Thursday, June 21) is the day on which I urge everyone who can possibly do so, to visit the Burnsville Armory between 1 and 6 p. m. and make his or her gift to the bloodmobile from the Asheville Area Blood Center."

Mrs. Holcombe speaks with authority, for she is the Blood Program Chairman for the Yancey County Unit of the Mayland Red Cross Chapter which serves Yancey, Mitchell and Avery Counties. "A quota of at least 100 pints has been set for today's visit of the bloodmobile to Burnsville," says Mrs. Holcombe.

"If you have never given blood before, today is your opportunity to help begin saving lives, because your blood, a gift which only you can give, may well be the means of saving a life. The Red Cross has recorded many instances in which the blood a man or woman has donated to the Red Cross has been the means of saving his or her very own life."

"Giving blood causes only slight inconvenience and requires less than an hour of your time. If you're afraid that giving blood may weaken you, remember that the average adult has about 10 to 12 pints of blood in his or her body and the pint you give the bloodmobile today will be replaced within less than 48 hours."

"Some Yancey County residents give every time the bloodmobile visits Burnsville. Some donors have given a total of more than eight gallons each. "Don't let the regular donors do it all. Join them today and begin letting your blood help save lives."

Cub Scouts, Leaders And Sponsors Gather Near Tents At Camp Daniel Boone

Cub Weekend At Camp Daniel Boone Includes Scouts From Yancey County

Eight, nine and ten-year-old boys from all over Western North Carolina participated in Cub weekend at Camp Daniel Boone, near Waynesville on Saturday and Sunday.

Not excluded were eleven boys and their nine sponsors from Burnsville pack 502 and several other Yancey County boys.

Each boy had the opportunity to participate in varied activities as their adult escorts watched or joined in the fun.

The cubs fired rifles, shot arrows, rowed canoes, played volleyball and broom hockey, took a blind hike, and observed model campsites and ecology methods. Some brave souls swam in an ice-cold mountain-stream fed lake.

Fishermen were allowed to catch two fish per day-- and there were many lines dangling. The campfire was lots of fun, too. Several Explorer Scouts, who had served as guides and instructors during the day, sang, led group singing, and played parts in typically corny camp skits.

Sunday after a short non-denominational service in a unique chapel with roof and supports, but no walls, the boys and their fathers and sponsors headed for home.

This program was undoubtedly subsidized by the Daniel Boone Council--to which our local United Fund contributes.

Thanks to all who made it possible to go from the participants.

Revenue Sharing Program Report Shows County To Expend 100% For Education

The Board of Commissioners of Yancey County has declared its intention to expend the entire $138,000 received under the federal revenue sharing program for the first half of 1973 on the county's school construction program. The greater part of this money will go toward the construction of the new high school.

This declaration of intention was made in a formal report filed this week with the U.S. Treasury Department, which administers the revenue sharing program. At the same time, the town board of Burnsville filed a comparable report stating their intentions regarding the expenditure of the $17,000 which the town is receiving for the first half of this year.

Burnsville plans to spend $5,500 of its revenue sharing money on the rebuilding of sidewalks, $5,000 for construction work on the library, $4,000 on a new accounting machine, and $2,500 for the financial administration of the town.

These reports, it was pointed out by both Chairman Oscar Deyton of the county commissioners, and Mayor James Anglin of Burnsville, do not cover the entire receipts to date of revenue sharing money, but only that portion allotted for the first half of the current year. The amounts received for 1972 were even larger than the funds covered by the reports just filed, and both county and town have broad latitude regarding the expenditure of this money. This money is now on deposit in special accounts, and to date no final decision has been made regarding its expenditure.

When announcement was made that all the revenue sharing money covered by the current report was to be spent on school construction, some concern was expressed that the county commissioners had failed to provide for the necessary renovation of the old Northwestern Bank building, which is to be converted into the county library. The commissioners pointed out, however, that the considerable revenue sharing money from the 1972 allotment is still available for the library project.

Elsewhere in this issue are reproduced the Planned Use Reports submitted to Washington by both the county and Burnsville. From now on, the law requires that comparable reports be published every six months. The purpose of these reports is to inform citizens, so that they can express their views to their governing boards.

Detailed reports following actual expenditure of the funds will be made periodically to Washington. The Federal Government is depending heavily on this required publicity at the local level to assure that revenue sharing funds are put to good use.

Crafts Fair Has Grown

At the 17th annual Mitchell Crafts Fair on August 3 and 4, there will be a large number of craftsmen presenting a wide variety of crafts. The craftsmen will come mostly from Yancey and nearby neighboring counties, but there will be others from various places in North Carolina and at least five other states.

The Fair has continued to grow and attract a larger number of craftsmen from its beginning by the Parkway Playhouse in the summer of 1956. Later, when the Yancey County Chamber of Commerce began to sponsor the Fair, there was continued growth which has made the annual event a big attraction for Yancey County.

Along with the craftsmen and their crafts, there are games, entertainment, and the chicken barbecue on Saturday to draw both the young and old to two days of fun at the Fair.

Licenses Must Be Obtained

Mr. T. J. Leatherwood, Revenue Collector, urges taxpayers who are liable for State privilege licenses to procure them before July 1, 1973. According to Mr. Leatherwood, timely applications for licenses together with the correct remittance, should be mailed to the North Carolina Department of Revenue, P. O. Box 25000, Raleigh, North Carolina 27640 or submitted to the local State Revenue office. He advises that the penalty for failure to comply will be 5% for each delinquent month, or fraction thereof.

Field Hearing On Wilderness

There will be a field hearing on Eastern Wilderness areas in Roanoke, Virginia on June 25, 1973 according to Del W. Thorsen, Forest Supervisor of the National Forests in North Carolina. This will be held by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee at the Roanoke Civic Center--Exhibit Hall, starting at 9:30 a. m.

Thorsen said the hearings are on proposals to designate areas in the Eastern United States for National Wilderness Act preservation. The proposed areas in North Carolina are: The Craggy Mountain Area, Joyce Kilmer-Slickrock Area and the Pocosin Area of Eastern North Carolina.

Two Bills will be considered, S-316 and S-938. The first Bill, if passed, will make 28 instant wilderness areas. Senate Bill #938 provides for study of 53 areas for possible wilderness designation.

Senator Henry Jackson, D-Washington, co-sponsored both Bills and is Chairman of the Senate Interior Committee, the parent body of the Public Lands Committee. Senator Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colorado, will preside over the Roanoke hearing.

Continuing, Thorsen said witnesses will be requested to hold testimony to five minutes. They also may submit statements to be placed on file.

If anyone wishes to testify, they can mail their request to Senator-Interior Committee, Room #3106 Dirksen Building, Washington, D. C. 20510. Attention: Porter Ward.

Local 1% Sales and Use Tax collections by County were reported for May, 1973 in a statement issued by J. Howard Coble, Commissioner, State Dept. of Revenue, Raleigh.

The report shows Yancey County collections for the month of May amounted to $12,545.38 which compared favorably with the amount of just over fifteen thousand dollars reported for Mitchell County and well exceeded the $8,895.10 collections from Madison County for the same period.

U. S. Rep. Roy A. Taylor announced Friday the approval of a $69,322 grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission to assist in providing adequate primary health care for the 12,000 residents of Yancey County.

The project will provide a physician, two nurse practitioners and a number of related personnel.

Total cost of the project is $96,095, with local sources providing $26,273.

Two Yancey Students At N.C. Governor's School

The eleventh session of the Governor's School of North Carolina began on Sunday, June 17, with the arrival of 393 N. C. high school juniors and seniors on the Salem College campus. Those attending Governor's School from Yancey County for this session include Broma Bradford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Bradford, a junior at Cane River High School whose area of interest at the Governor's School is French; Susan Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ned the teaching of the gifted. The special goal of the Governor's School is to enable the student to see the relationship between the artistic and academic disciplines. Theory, especially 20th Century theory, is stressed as the students look for solutions to today's problems. James I. Bray, Resident Director, and Dr. H. Michael Lewis, Coordinator of Curriculum, have been meeting with the Governor's School faculty during the week prior to the arrival of the students. Of the sixty-two faculty and staff members, forty-seven have worked with the program previously.

Twentieth Century theory is studied and analyzed in each of the major fields of the Governor's School. This Area I includes English, Natural Science, French, Mathematics, Social Science, Art, Drama, Choral Music, Instrumental Music, and Dance. Each student spends approximately two-thirds of his time in his major field of giftedness. The remaining time is spent in two other areas which concentrate on expanding the student's field of knowledge to other fields and eventually leading him to a greater understanding of himself and his giftedness.

The Department of Public Instruction, under the direction of Dr. A. Craig Phillips, sponsors this experimental 7-week school for academically and/or artistically talented students from the state. Simultaneously, the third Teacher-Training Institute is being held for selected North Carolina Teachers. Under the direction of Libby Broome, these teachers will work with the Governor's School faculty and student body as an in-service training program in
