IF THE MOTOR VEHICLE OWNER who receives his 1962 renewal card (and the great majority will by the first of the year, since the Department of Motor Vehicles put them in the mail around Dec. 15) will follow these simple instructions, he will avoid last-minute delays and help license clerks give faster and more effective service to all. In addition to instructions indicated on the chart, it will help facilitate his purchase if he has ready the correct amount of fees when he approaches the sales counter (the license plate fee plus $1 for driver education). Also should his address be incorrect, he should cross out the old address and enter the correct one on all five sections of the card. If the owner has not received his renewal card by Jan. 8, he should notify the Department of Motor Vehicles in Raleigh, giving his correct name and address, his current 1961 license number, the year, make, and serial number of his vehicle, along with a request for a 1962 renewal card. License plates for 1962 go on sale at the Carolina Motor Club Murphy Western Auto.

Internal Revenue Installs Automatic Data System; Assigns Account Number

The Internal Revenue Service announced today that its new automatic data processing system, went into effect on a pilot basis in the Atlanta Region January 1, 1962. Taxpayers will continue to file their returns with the district director's offices in their home communities. The returns for this area will be dispatched to the Atlanta Center.

Each taxpayer will have a single account even though he may file various kinds of Federal tax returns in the first year of operation. Only business-type returns will be brought into the system. To assure proper identification will be very important that the employer's identification number, already used by the taxpayer over the past many years on certain of his returns be entered on all of the returns he files with the Service.

Beginning this year in the Atlanta Region, the Service is planning to send each business taxpayer pre-addressed return forms bearing this number. Of vital importance under the new system is the need for all key items on the return to be filled in, particularly by filers of Form 1120, Corporation Income Tax Return. The information from the returns will be transferred to punch cards by key-punch operators. Because this work must be done on a production line basis, the key-punch operators will be in no position to edit the returns. The Service, understandably, does not feel that the Government should be deprived of the operating economies the system offers by having to put all of the returns through an extensive editing process prior to transcription. The Service hopes and expects that tax practitioners and taxpayers will begin to file complete returns next year, so that the transition will have no impact whatever on taxpayers. The Internal Revenue Service intends to be as reasonable as possible in the initial phases of the transition and hopes that no additional enforcement measures will be necessary.

GRAY INSURANCE AGENCY

Hayesville, N. C.

January 1, 1962

To all my insurance clients and policyholders:

I have transferred my insurance business to the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Hayesville, N. C., effective January 1, 1962. All renewals and premiums that become due on or after January 1, 1962 will be handled by the Insurance Department of Citizens Bank & Trust Company, Hayesville. All uncollected premiums that became due prior to January 1, 1962, should be paid to the undersigned.

This agency was started by my brother, J. B. Gray, now deceased, more than forty years ago, then operated a while as Gray Brothers, until I took over the operation of it about thirty years ago. I feel that all my good customers are entitled to know why I made the decision to sell my Agency to the bank. Through the years, and particularly in the last ten, I have been fortunate in having a large growth in my insurance business. My law practice has likewise grown. Thus both businesses have reached the point where I am physically unable to give to all my clients the service that I desire to give and to which they are entitled. Therefore, it became necessary to transfer the insurance business in order that I could devote full time to my law practice in the future.

My companies have consented to the transfer and are issuing license to the bank. In order to handle your business more efficiently and give you better service, the bank is setting up a full time Insurance Department in Hayesville with hours from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The bank has also had many years experience in the insurance business through its Insurance Departments in the Andrews and Murphy banks and I feel that you will be in good hands.

I want each customer to know that I sincerely appreciate the business you have given me over the years and that I have enjoyed doing business with you.

With best wishes for the New Year, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

T. C. Gray, Agent

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Morganton -- The 87th Congress convenes for its second session at noon, on Wednesday, January 10. Battles are scheduled over some old and some new legislative proposals. The biggest Congressional fight of the session may come over the Presidents request for the extension of the Trade Agreements Act of 1934. It is reported that the President will ask the Congress for a across-the-board authority to lower tariffs on a wide range of articles imported into this country. The present act expires on June 20, 1962. Three other old proposals will almost certainly provoke extended debate if they come to the floor of the Congress. They are the aid to education bill, medical care for the aged bill and tax revision bill. Under the King Bill, which provides medical care for the aged under Social Security amendments, the House Ways and Means Committee must first consider this proposal because it is a revenue raising measure. Likewise, all tax revision measures must first be voted on by the House Ways and Means Committee. Thus, it is likely that it will be some time before the Senate will be called upon to consider either of these legislative proposals. One of the significant events during the adjournment of the Congress was the death of Speaker Rayburn. He wielded vast powers of persuasion over the House membership. His passing may have a profound effect on some of the controversial bills requested by the President.

Foreign Affairs -- History and Geography have made Berlin a symbol since 1870 for international tensions. 1961 saw Berlin become a new monument to villainy when the Russian wall was erected in serpentine fashion through the heart of the city. The wall may not come down in 1962, but it now appears that the Soviets will seek a settlement there during the coming months. Close observers feel that Russia has received the maximum effect from the strife it has caused over Berlin and will seek new areas in which to stir up tension. Last summer when the President talked with Khrushchev in Vienna, it appeared that the United States would face a most serious period during the winter. But, Khrushchev made his threats and has momentarily backed down. I am convinced that the strong military build up of our armed forces has lessened the Berlin tensions over the last few months.

It is my hope that during 1962 the United States will extend itself more at home and be wiser in its expenditures abroad.
