

Profiles In Sports

By "Red" Schuyler

If you are feeling bad, or perhaps down in the dumps, if the wife is mad at you, maybe you had a bad day at the office or on the job, or perhaps just down and out and would like to snap out of it, let me make a suggestion. Now this won't cure all your troubles, but we think that perhaps it might make you forget about them for a little while: Go out to the ball park some night when the local softball teams are playing. If you don't come away feeling just a little better, then something is wrong and you'd better see your doctor.

These fellows don't claim to be pros, but they all play hard and give it everything they have, and what else can you do after you have done your best? You'll see some fat and some skinny players, some short and some tall. Weather conditions don't seem to matter, that is if it doesn't rain while they are playing. They don't mind playing in the rain, but the rain is hard on the light bulbs. If it rains on up until time to play, loads of sawdust are hauled in and spread around to soak up the water.

Anything, and just about everything happens at some of these games. There was the night they were using sandbags for bases and they were pretty dirty. A dirty white, small dog was resting just about three yards off from first base. This player comes to bat and swats a long one to right field and in going to first base watches the ball and takes his eye off first base. The right fielder misses the ball and the runner almost stepped on the dog for first base. He recovered in time to keep from stepping on the dog, and possibly prevented himself from getting "bit for a hit".

We are not going to mention any names because I certainly don't want to embarrass anyone, just more or less try to let you know what you are missing.

You might have been there the night that one team stayed in bat so long that one person received credit for making all three outs in one inning. All the teams are pretty well matched, with the exception of the boys from Tomotia, and as of now no team has come close to beating them. They are leading the league.

The Jaycees have lost all their games with the exception of one and that was the last game they played last week. They managed to win this one while their star player was in the hospital.

The game was called after the completion of three innings with the Jaycees leading 28-21. They would have played the regulation seven inning game but some of the fellows said they had to go on account of it was just about milking time. I understand this game is to be concluded first chance they get to play together again.

All the teams except the undefeated Tomotia team have been beaten anywhere from two games to all of them.

Games are played on Monday and Thursday night, unless it happens to be raining at game time and the lumber mills in this area have run out of sawdust and shavings. This past Monday night was an unusual night... For the first time the field was completely dry and some of the fellows had quite a time keeping their footing. Someone suggested wetting down the field so that the conditions would be normal, but they never got around to this.

We recommend a night at the ball park when some of these teams are playing as a sure cure for the blues.

Last week we said that we would not write about racing this week, but I can't pass up the opportunity to mention something about the race held at Bristol this past Sunday.

I would like to repeat a quote made by Richard Petty over the years and Sunday became a reality. Richard has often said, and we quote, "It's not where you start in a race, but where you finish that pays off."

If you listened to the race, you'll have something to remember for a long time. I can't recall when a fellow has ever won a race and only led but one lap. Freddy Lorenson did just that Sunday. Richard Petty, after leading the race for approximately 450 laps out of 500 came in second after blowing his engine on the 497th, coasting two more for 498th and 499th, but couldn't quite make it the five hundredth.

Car No. 28, driven by Fred Lorenson, Ned Jarrett and again by Fred Lorenson, won this race by leading it the last lap. This just goes to show you that you can lead every lap but one, and still lose.

It was a heartbreaker for Richard and he really took it better than he would have been expected to, but he realizes and knows and made this remark, "That's racing."

These drivers and cars will be at Asheville-Weaverlyville Speedway Sunday, August 9, for another gruelling 500 lap, 250 mile race on the world's fastest half-mile paved track. It will be a good race and you can be assured of seeing some good competition if you are there. That's Sunday, August 9, at the Asheville-Weaverlyville Track.

OBITUARY

MRS. DORIS HEDDEN CHATTANOOGA - Funeral services were held Friday, July 17, here for Mrs. Doris Hedden, 28, wife of Dr. James W. (Jimmy) Hedden.

Dr. Hedden is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hedden, formerly of Hayesville, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Alexander.

The couple were enroute to Wilmington to visit relatives and became involved in a traffic accident in Wadesboro. Mrs. Hedden died of massive internal injuries within a few hours after the accident.

Dr. Hedden was a patient in a hospital there for several days and released. Their two-year-old adopted son was uninjured.

Those attending the funeral services from Hayesville was Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander, Donald Garrison, and Mr. and Mrs. Roald Hedden.

Peace Corps Expand Poultry Operations

Twenty miles east of New Delhi, India, a young Peace Corps volunteer is teaching villagers how to raise and market poultry and eggs. He has changed the eating habits of the villagers, improved their diets and given them a new source of income.

"A hundred others like him," says James M. Stewart, County Extension Chairman, "both young and old, in other Indian villages are having similar experiences."

At the Uttar Pradesh Agricultural University, a small group of Peace Corps Volunteers has in little more than a year introduced commercial poultry raising to more than 100 villagers. The poultry raisers have formed their own cooperative and now market their produce in Delhi and the surrounding area.

The State government now wants Peace Corps Volunteers to start poultry development projects in four districts in eastern Uttar Pradesh--Jaunpur, poultry farms or at State extension centers in each of the districts. They will work singly in teams of two, traveling throughout the districts to encourage farmers to raise poultry, to upgrade flocks, increase egg production, and to develop new markets.

Twenty-five hundred miles west of New Delhi in Ankara, Turkey, the Middle East Technical University is establishing a poultry demonstration unit. Peace Corps Volunteers with experience in commercial poultry raising will be assigned to this METU unit. They will train university students in the techniques of poultry raising. These students, in turn, will work in rural areas helping to start village-run poultry units. Other Peace Corps Volunteers will be assigned to community development projects in rural areas to encourage small farmers and villagers to get into the poultry business.

In a dozen other countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, Peace Corps Volunteers are helping the people improve their standard of living through the introduction of poultry raising projects. These countries recognize in poultry development a source of both food and income for the people. Consequently, they are asking the Peace Corps for more Volunteers with training and experience in commercial poultry raising and marketing.

"You don't have to be a college man," says Jamus

Stewart, "If you know the poultry business and would like to share your know-how with people in India, Turkey, or any one of several other countries. Just fill out a Peace Corps Volunteer Questionnaire and send it to Peace Corps, Washington, D. C. 20526.
