Emancipation Proclamation Program At Longwood Church

BY MATTIE HEWETT
An Emancipation Proclamation program began at 12 noon Jan. 1 at Mt. Zion Missionary Baptist Church in Longwood, where Rev. M. C. Herring is pastor.

Marlowe enjoyed the holidays at home with their parents, Rudolph and Arvella Marlowe. Diane lives in Chesapeake, Virginia and teaches Sunday school in Norfolk. Judy is employed with Home Security in Durham.

Surprise On Program
A Christmas program at Pleasant Grove was filled with happiness and surprises. One especially was a beautiful flower arrangement purchased by Ocean View Youth Department for Union President Mrs. Nell Mae Gause.

Retirement Party Held
A retirement party was given Dec. 28 for James Hobson Bryant at Sunny Point Army Terminal in Southport.

Freedom is the most wonderful experience that a slave has ever known except for accepting Jesus as ones personal saviour. He's the one who gives us that blessed hope as we often sing "We Shall Overcome."

Mrs. Zephia Grissett, guest speaker, spoke on the Emancipation Proclamation, which was issued Jan. 1, 1863, when Abraham Lincoln declared no more slavery.

Harriet Tubman, Helen Keller and Fredrick Douglas were among others who helped to free the slaves.

During the program two large plaques were presented to Deacon Patrick Stanley and Mrs. Annie R. Bryant, in recognition of devoted commitment, meritorious service and demonstrated abilities to sustain the national philosophy and programs of NAACP and for their support of the association's fight for freedom aimed at eliminating all racial discrimination in our national and local life and for their generous contributions to the NAACP financial appeal.

Benjamin E. Hooks is executive director and Rev. Julius C. Hope is director of religious affairs.

Attend Seminar
Deacon J. Hobson Bryant and Deacon Arthur Gore attended a leadership seminar Saturday, Jan. 5 at J. J. Johnson Baptist Assembly in Laurel Hill. Michael Darby was in charge and Nancy High was coordinator for ushers and presidents' conference.

According to those in attendance, everyone seemed to be bright and ready for the big challenge of the new year.

Comings And Goings

Mr. and Mrs. James Franklin (Elizabeth) of Detroit, Michigan, recently visited Mrs. Franklin's mother, Mrs. Pencie Bryant. The visitors went back home by way of Roanoke, Virginia, where they visited Mr. Franklin's relatives.

Making A Will

BY DICKY POWELL BRUNSWICK FUNERAL SERVICE

A will is a legal binding document that insures the distribution of your possessions according to your wishes after your death. Should you die without a will, it is unlikely your belongings will be distributed to the persons or in the proportions you would have chosen.

Why do so many people avoid making a will? We don't like to think about our own mortality. Ones death certainly is not advanced by making a will, but many people seem to think so. It is difficult to face your true feelings about your assets and the people you want to receive those assets when you die. You may feel you don't have enough property to justify making a will, but even in a very small estate, the lack of a will can cause problems. The reasons for not making a will are certainly outweighed by the benefits of having one.

May we suggest you seek the services of a competent attorney to write your will?
