Guys And Dolls Looking Ahead

Information on upcoming activities dominated the February 25 meeting of the Guys and Dolls Extension Homemakers Couples Club at the Brunswick County Extension Office in Bolivia.

Those events include the next humanities seminar sponsored by the extension service in conjunction with N.C. State University and several workshops sponsored by the county agency.

"Thomas Wolfe-Author" is the topic of the seminar, which meets each Tuesday in April. It will combine group discussion with leadership by a professor from the Raleigh campus.

Club Counselor Mary Russ presented a program on "Wills and Estate Planning."

Members reported 84 hours of volunteer work with Dasher Memorial Hospital Volunteers, the extension Advisory Committee, extension homemaking workshop preparation and county council records.

President John Lewis announced the March regular meeting will be an area meeting with a representative from the child protective services section of the Brunswick County Department of Social Services presenting the program. A business meeting will also be held in March, but attendance at area meeting is required for perfect attendance records management.

Representatives from each extension homemakers club in the county are to meet in April with Edith Hoy, international chairperson, to plan county participation in the annual "Adopt-A-Student" program in which the county hosts for a week one or two foreign students attending N.C. State University.

Alice Ferris gave the opening devotional. Refreshments included liver-wurst spread and homemade bread, banana bread with cream cheese spread and coffee.
