

A GROWING FAMILY and a temperamental storm prompted a thorough renovation of the Redwine's coastal home, with a new look inside and out.

Redwine's Sharing Their Dreams

If possible, David wants to stay in the House a while because "the longer you're in office the more effective you can be." But if it were to interfere too much with his family's welfare, he'd give it up.

Formerly a high school art teacher, Penny works part-time at Shallotte Preschool, dividing other hours between her busy family, church work and the Shallotte Junior Woman's Club. Like David, she's given up things to concentrate on priorities: their family and the state legislature.

"I'm contented," she says without hesitation. And if she ever feels a need for change, perhaps returning to graduate school, she's confident of David's supportiveness.

"You would be, wouldn't you?" she asked, equally confident of how the man beside her would answer.

A STAIRCASE leading upstairs offers Erin and Mandy a convenient banister for sliding and a focal point for Penny's art collection, which includes several pieces of her own work.
