

Rain Didn't Slow The Fun At Waccamaw 'Spring Fling'

BY SUSAN USHER
 "It's gonna tickle," speech specialist Pam Williams warned as she dabbed red paint to the side of Wolfpack supporter Jason Eric Gore's face to form an "NCSU".
 She added, "Then it starts to itch." So why get your face painted?
 "To show off," Donnie Lee Milligan was quick to say as art teacher Carol Norfolk put the finishing touches on his face art, a Tar Heel patch. The boys darted.
 Getting a 50¢ face job was a must for most students last Thursday night at Waccamaw Elementary School's "Spring Fling," a community event and fundraising effort co-sponsored by the school and its parent-teacher group. Booths were arrayed along the U-shape of the buildings, most accessible from the sidewalk overhang outside.

A steady drizzle took some of the sizzle out of water gun fights in the courtyard. Inside the cafeteria, fairgoers munched on pork barbecue and hotdogs washed down with Pepsi and juices.

Rain didn't bother Patrick Hughes, whose head was protected by an umbrella hat as he waged war with a plastic, water-filled gun.

The annual fair included a country store with canned goods, crafts and flea market items for sale, a bingo hall, cake walk and a variety of games and activities ranging from a duck pond to a hoop shoot.

Malcolm King conducted the final event of the night, drawing the interest of parents with an auction of items ranging from a shovel to a swiveling coat rack. Children fidgeted nearby as they munched on candy apples or—in some cases—napped.

In drawings at the auction, Gail Vereen won $50 cash, while Betty Hughes won a free mountain weekend vacation for four. Jenny Spivey won two decorative pillows.

Not all adults took home prizes, but youngsters stepped away from every game with one or more.

Jessica Inman, 3, stood on a table to turn the "Wheel of Fortune," and came away with a mirror and comb, coloring books and a "pick a point" pen.

Guidance Counselor Betty Buck and Katherine Lee drew a crowd of assorted ages at the booth where they were writing with glue and glitter to personalize a choice of two felt hats: a curled brim affair or a Robin Hood hat with feather.

A darkened room with strobe light and color wheel drew youngsters inside to dance to the beat in a disco "contest" every 45 minutes.

When the lights came up, the room's daytime purpose emerged. A sign on the wall listed the steps used in studying a new spelling word: Look, Say, Think, Write, Check.

SOME TAR HEEL FANS like bumper stickers, but Donnie Lee Milligan flaunts his loyalty on a cheek with the help of art teacher Carol Norfolk.
