Public TV Will Film Oyster Festival Events

Film crews will be in Shallotte from October 10-13 filming the N.C. Oyster Festival for "This Time Each Year", an hour-long special that will air in the spring of 1986 over the nine channels of The University of North Carolina Center for Public Television network.

Throughout the year, film crews under the direction of Center producer Robert Dobbs have traveled across the state filming the many ways in which North Carolinians celebrate their culture and heritage.

From the New Year's well-wishing of the Cherryville shooters to the N.C. State Fair in Raleigh in October, the Center will capture on film the many ways people from unique backgrounds and geographic locations unite to celebrate their common heritage.

"This Time Each Year" will feature scenes of each celebration and interviews with participants, and will weave a personal tapestry of this state and its people.

Crews have already recorded the American Indian Dance Festival in Wilmington, the National Hollerin' Contest at Spivey's Corner, the Festival of Festivals in Franklin, the Higiuanu Games at Grandfather Mountain, the Mountain Folk and Dance Festival in Asheville, the Outer Banks Folk Music Festival at Atlantic Beach, Farmer's Day in Richlands, the National Balloon Rally in Statesville, the Bright Leaf Hoedown in Yanceyville, and, most recently, the Fall Festival in Brasstown.

Things have changed, but one fact remains the same: Nobody does it better than your telephone company!

YOU'VE been hearing all sorts of reports about the break-up of the telephone industry, and about all the changes taking place as a result of government deregulation.

While things are very different in the telephone industry today, we believe one fact remains the same: Nobody does it better than your local telephone company.

We're local. We're abreast of today's high technologies. We're still ready to serve you. If you've got a problem, you know you can rely on us to help just like always.

While some of the rules have changed in the telephone industry, we're still the folks you can count on for the best in telephone service and equipment.
