Temporary Access To Lot Approved

A woman who plans to build a day care center on Mulberry Street in Shallotte received permission Wednesday for a temporary driveway permit to allow access to the property during construction.

Rita Stanaland told Shallotte aldermen that her lot allows only 10 feet for a driveway, but that she is negotiating to buy an additional 10 feet to allow a circle-through driveway. If not, the owner of adjoining property on the other side of the lot has pledged he would provide a 10-foot easement for that purpose.

Town aldermen said Ms. Stanaland would have to have the other driveway arrangements completed before the center opens for business. The N.C. Department of Transportation will not issue driveway permits on state streets within town without the town's clearance, said Mayor Beamon Hewett.

In other business, aldermen: •Learned the town should expect reductions in General Revenue Sharing payments in January, April and July of 1986 of between 7.2% and 25%.

•Heard that the fire department met twice in October, with 16 and nine members attending respectively. Firefighters went to five vehicle fires, one tractor fire, one bulldozer fire and one LP gas leak, with estimated property losses due to fire of $105,015.

•Asked Town Clerk Cynthia Long to begin checking on possible locations for the town Christmas Party.

Tar Heel Scenes Focus Of Watercolor Exhibit

You saw him—and his paintings—on television, promoting the Tar Heel state with his former Roanoke Island neighbor Andy Griffith in the "I Like Calling North Carolina Home" campaign.

"He" is artist Vic Gillispie, now a resident of Supply, and next week you can see his paintings of North Carolina in an exhibit at North Carolina National Bank's Shallotte office. Griffith collects Gillispie's works, which typically sell for a minimum of four figures, according to a 1981 article in the Greensboro Daily News.

Gillispie's watercolors—which he describes as "representational" rather than realistic, will be on view Monday through Thursday, Nov. 18-21, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the bank lobby. They depict Tar Heel landscapes.

When the Alamance County native returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam, he completed a course in commercial art and advertising and design at the Technical Institute of Alamance. He decided to make his living as an artist—and succeeded.

"I feel like I'm a good enough artist people will enjoy looking at them," said Gillispie of the forthcoming show.

VOTE NO NOV. 19

Don't be misled.

Vocational subjects should be taught in high school. Higher level courses could be obtained at low cost via CFTI.

Don't add to the almost 30 million dollar debt we still have for past bond referendums.

Many of us cannot afford another huge empire.

Long Beach Voters Elect Change

Election results—once in—brought news of a change of order to the town of Long Beach last Wednesday morning: Commissioner Johnny Vereen III will replace incumbent Ben Thomas as mayor in December.

Thomas has been mayor since 1982 and also served as mayor from 1979 to 1981.

Vereen received 573 votes to Thomas' 497 in election results tallied shortly before dawn last Wednesday morning. In a primary one month ago, he led Thomas by 60 votes.

Vereen has said the town's recreation budget, as well as its overall budget, is too large, and he's spoken out against the current zoning ordinance.

Joining Vereen at the town hall will be new commissioners William H. Millard, 67, and former chief of police James Sloop, 55; as well as returning commissioner L. Lee Presnell, 68.

On most major issues during the past two years the board has voted 4-3, with Thomas breaking the tie in favor of a group consisting of David Ford, Michael Ostrom and Walter Johnson. Presnell and Vereen have traditionally voted with Cheryl Coleman, who did not seek re-election.

Voting totals for Long Beach candidates were as follows: Thomas, 497; Vereen, 573; Millard, 512; Presnell, 543; Sloop, 549; John Ramsey, 354; and James R. Somers, 412.

Long Beach election returns were delayed when a programming error was discovered in the machine used to electronically record the votes in the municipal election. While voters were instructed to mark the ballot for three commissioners' candidates, the machine had been programmed for only two. All ballots with more than two votes marked were "kicked out" or rejected by the machine, said Lynda Britt, supervisor of the Brunswick County Board of Elections. The county had provided the machine, which had been programmed before delivery to the county.

Incumbents were returned to office in two other Oak Island towns, for which results were tallied earlier Tuesday.

Yaupon Beach voters returned four incumbents to office, with the low vote-getter to serve a two-year term and the others four-year terms. Robert Brown, appointed last year to the seat resigned by Harold Hines, led the field with 76 votes, gaining a four-year term. Also returning for four-year terms are Homer Brewer and Ernie Rees, with 68 votes each. J.M. Warren, with 62, votes, will serve the remaining two years of Hines' term.

At Caswell Beach, Commissioners Robert McCracken and Duncan Stuart return to office for four-year terms, garnering 41 and 38 votes respectively. An outspoken challenger, William Zimmerman, received only 17 votes.

Trustees Uncertain
 With Long Beach totals in, election of trustees for J. Arthur Doshier Memorial Hospital still was not resolved Wednesday morning and may not be anytime soon.

Incumbent Evelyn "Teal" Butler will return to office after leading in the returns with 1,160 votes. She will be joined by Charles Johnson of Long Beach. Johnson received 901 votes, trailing Dr. Robert Zukoski's 1,158 votes.

But Zukoski cannot hold the seat unless he succeeds in challenging a 1913 law that prohibits practicing physicians from serving on the hospital board of trustees.

If his bid fails, or he decides not to challenge the law, the third seat would be awarded to Charles H. Rogers, who received 710 votes Tuesday.

A fifth candidate, Charles Roof, received 621 votes, according to Lynda Britt, supervisor of the Brunswick County Board of Elections.

In other election activity, a canvass of election results by the Brunswick County Board of Elections Thursday turned up no changes in results from nine towns and two other special districts.

"There were no problems," said Ms. Britt. "The totals stayed the same."

Election boards at Holden Beach, Ocean Isle Beach, Boiling Spring Lakes and Yaupon Beach held similar canvasses Thursday.

Older Women To 'Speak Out' At Public Hearing

Older women from along the North Carolina coast will get to "speak out" on issues ranging from transportation to crime at a public hearing today (Thursday, Nov. 14) in Wilmington from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Lucille Shuffler Center, 2011 Carolina Beach Road.

The speak out is part of a statewide effort to discern the feelings of older women and others involved in issues related to older women, and to suggest legislative action on those issues.

Participants will specifically be asked to address the topics of transportation, housing, income, health care and crime as they relate to the elderly, but are free to comment on other issues as well. State and U.S. legislators are invited to the event also.

For more information, Brunswick County seniors should contact Ronnie Robinson of the Brunswick County Office on Aging.
