Redwine: County Should Address Roads Problem

BY SUSAN USHER

Special road legislation sought by Brunswick County commissioners might be difficult to obtain, State Rep. E. David Redwine advised the board Monday night. He said most counties updated their subdivision ordinances to prevent the situation Brunswick County wants the state to handle.

Commissioners had sent Redwine a resolution asking the General Assembly to amend Department of Trausportation policies regarding subdivision roads, so that the state could take over such roads regardless of when they were built or ether they meet DOT standards.

Currently, roads built since around 1975 must meet minimum construc tion and right-of-way requirements before DOT will accept them.

According to Planning Director John Harvey, 90 percent of the county's roads are private and unpaved The county doesn't require privately-maintained roads to meet state stan-

Said Redwine, "It's a tough issue for me to convince legislators across the state that Brunswick County is in a special situation."

Since the DOT regulations changed in 1975, he said, most counties have amended their subdivision or-dinances. "They won't let subdivi-sions be recorded or platted unless their roads—public or private—are built to state standard," he explained. Then, if property owners later decide they no longer want to maintain their own streets, the roads can be taken over by DOT readily.

As for the proposed bill, he con-tinued, "I don't think they'll look kindly on that because they've all already bit the bullet."

While saying he would work on the matter, Redwine said it was a matter better handled locally.

"It's something you need to ad-ress, how you want subdivisions to do it. Otherwise, the problem is going to continue," he stressed.

In related discussion, individual commissioners had legislative concerns of their own. Commissioner Frankie Rabon asked for continued support of the artificial reef pro-gram, while Chairman Grace Beasley said more funds are needed for roads, with recognition given to the Brunswick's status as the secondfastest growing county in the state. Commissioner Jim Poole wanted the state to not require counties to take on new projects after their budgets are already set; Redwine said during the session legislators would at least consider sending along money to cover first-year expenses for such

"We know it's hard to pull a rabbit out of a hat," he said. One audience member, Peggy Jaynes, inquired about a state lottery referendum bill. According to Red-wine several versions have been drafted, including one that specifies that proceeds be used for scho

A media poll suggests the issue won't get a majority's support, he said. "It will come up and I hope it will get a fair hearing." Also, Redwine told local NAACP members he plans to vote for a bill to make Martin Luther King Jr.'s hirth-day a paid state holiday.

Annual Cookie Sale Commences

Beginning today (Thursday), local Girl Scouts will take orders for cookies in their annual fund-raising campaign. They will go door-to-door from Jan. 23 through Feb. 8, offering the following varieties: pecan shortees, samoas, thin mints, do-si-dos, tagalongs, trefoils and chocolate chunks. Each box will sell for $2, with proceeds helping support Girl Scout troops, as well as the council and campsites.

Those who would like to place an order may call Peggy Aten, 845-2189.

American Legion Gives Scholarship

American Legion Post No. 247 of Shallotte will offer a scholarship fund grant of $1,800 to be used over the next three years at Brunswick Technical College, according to member Richard Britt.

Holden Commissioners Seek CAMA Permit To Repair Dunes

BY ETTA SMITH

Holden Beach commissioners are waiting to hear from the N.C. Office of Constal Management before offering oceanfront property owners a reduced price for repairs on dunes damaged in the Jan. 1 storm.

At a special session last Friday the board awarded a contract to Midway Construction Company, low bidder, to rebuild five breached dunes in the 600 and 700 blocks of Ocean Boulevard West and some locations on the east end of the strand. But the town must get a blanket or emergenev CAMA permit before Midway can egin pushing sand up on the beach

On Jan. 8 the board voted to act as a broker for property owners who want this type of work done, contrac-ting with a single firm with the idea of getting a lower price. Commissioners deferred sending letters regarding the work to oceanfront property owners until hearing from the state.

If the town receives the CAMA permit, the company will push sand from the beach to the dunes for $4 per linear foot and for $5 per linear foot

CAMA permit officials Bob Stroud and Mark Botbal met with Town Administrator Bob Buck and Building Inspector Dwight Carroll following the board's special session and told them the permit request would have to go through a review process, which they would try to speed up if possible, said Carroll.

He said homeowners whose hous have foundations within 20 feet of the dunes, or those who need to cover septic tanks, may still get an emergency permit from the town at no cost. Anyone whose property is furthur than 20 feet must pay $25 for a permit to make those repairs.

Carroll said the next high tides are expected around Jan. 27 and he hopes, but doubts, the town will get the blanket permit before then.

Other Business

In other business commissioners: Voted to begin using telephone credit cards for town business and to have business cards printed for members who want them. There is no charge to the town for the cards, according to Atkins.

•Voted to pay a $4,492 bill to Jerry Lewis & Associates of Shallotte for preparing bid specifications to have town's elevated water tank painted and inspected. Commis-sioner Hui Staniey said the board was led to believe the service would cost about $2,000, but added he thought the town could recover some of the money since the work wasn't finished
