

Lincoln Primary Claims Cafeteria Of Year Honors

Lincoln Primary School at Leland won Cafeteria of the Year honors at the Brunswick County School Food Service Association awards banquet May 17 at Leland Middle School.

Achievement and participation awards were presented by Paula Tillman, merchandising and facilities coordinator with the N.C. Dept. of Public Instruction, and Sheryl Johnson, county child nutrition director.

Leland Middle School finished second in the Cafeteria of the Year competition, followed by Bolivia Elementary in third.

Ms. Johnson said selection for cafeteria of the year is based on overall performance in a number of areas, including financial operations, employee attendance, nutrition education and student participation.

Lincoln's operation was financially sound, employees had a good attendance record and had no accidents in the kitchen, and had "something going all year long" in nutrition education, she said.

The staff also listened to students' suggestions, installing a salad bar at their request.

"If you make the students happy, participation should go up," said Ms. Johnson.

At Lincoln, it did this from— from about 78 percent overall to around 87 percent overall.

While Waccamaw Elementary was recognized as the cafeteria with highest overall work attendance, five individuals from across the county were honored for perfect work attendance. They are Mary Alice Hankins, manager, Bolivia Elementary; Marzella McKoy, manager, North Brunswick High; Maggie Jackson, manager, Southport

HEWETT COLEMAN

Primary; Lois St. George, assistant manager, Southport Primary; and Icelan Bellamy, Waccamaw.

Waccamaw, which also had the highest overall participation, was recognized for having both the highest breakfast and lunch participation of any elementary school. Leland was cited as having the best percent breakfast and lunch participation of any middle school. North Brunswick had the highest percent breakfast participation and tied with West Brunswick for highest percent lunch participation.

Bolivia Elementary School had the highest adult participation and was also recognized as having the most breakfast and lunch improvement.

Waccamaw was recognized for receiving the highest sanitation grade of any cafeteria, while Lincoln Primary was cited for having the best nutrition education and training program.

Lincoln Primary and Leland Middle received blue ribbon awards of excellence from the State Department of Public Instruction and South Brunswick Middle received a red ribbon.

Thirty-six county school cafeteria employees received certificates and pins for participating in the association's Walking Club. Members walked, cycled or jogged a total of 2,162.75 miles and lost a collective 195 pounds.

Florence Hewett of Union Primary School, who walked 266 miles, won the trophy for the most miles walked.

Marsha Coleman, Waccamaw

Elementary School, lost 26 pounds to receive the trophy for most pounds lost.

West Brunswick High School received a certificate for the school with the most miles walked, 325, and most pounds lost, 67.

Schools Superintendent Honors Academic Efforts

Thirty-six student scholars from the county's elementary, middle and high schools received awards of excellence from Brunswick County Superintendent of Schools P.R. Hankins last Tuesday at a banquet honoring them and their parents.

Guest speaker for the event was Robert Tyndall, dean of the School of Education at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. He commended Hankins and the county school board for their celebration of students' academic achievements.

Receiving awards of excellence, by school, were these students:

West Brunswick High: Chris Byrd, Perty Grissett, Allan Hewett, Terrance Nawara and Jennifer Russ; Shallotte Middle: Amanda Butrey, Elizabeth Detrie, Aaron Hawkins, Shenna Lancaster, Angela Long, Rachel Swain, Jeremie Varnam and Lucas Wagenseil;
