Get Physicals Early Health Department Nurse Advises

BY LYNN CARLSON Most people can't wait for summer. Kim McIntyre isn't one of them. She's the lead nurse in the Brunswick County Health Department's Child Development Clinic, and she's not looking forward to the onslaught of parents who'll wait until July or August to bring their children in for physical examinations required before starting school for the first time.

She encourages parents to take advantage of the slow season and make appointments now. Pre-school physicals are conducted on Fridays, by appointment only. Appointments are scheduled between 8:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Avoiding the rush isn't the only advantage to getting the examinations as soon as possible. The "headto-toe" physical can identify physical or developmental problems which could hinder a child's performance in school.

Hearing and vision are tested. A complete medical history is taken, or updated if the child is already a health department patient. Blood is tested for iron and for exposure to lead. A sickle cell anemia test is done if the child is at risk for the disease.

Referrals are made when abnormalities such as dental, hearing, speech or vision problems are discovered.

Public health nurses performing the exams also take advantage of the opportunity to provide health education materials and to talk about growth and development, safety, nutrition and dental hygiene.

"We try to tell them what they should expect at their child's age," McIntyre said.

nization records. If the child's inoculations are not current, the shots will be given at no cost. The state now requires five DPT (diptheria, pertussis and tetanus) shots, four polio vaccines and one MMR (measles, mumps and rubella) shot. Two MMRs are recommended because of Parents should also bring medical records for children who have had severe medical problems in the past.

"These exams are supposed to be done by December before the child first starts kindergarten, but I've recently done two for kids who are al-said spokesman Doris Benton.

A Women's Missionary Union (WMU) Appreciation Banquet will be held by the Brunswick Baptist Association for all pastors, WMU directors, church staff and their spouses Saturday, Feb. 27.

The dinner begins at 6:30 p.m. at from the Rural Church Division of The Duke Endowment.

The grant will assist in completing Seaside's new multipurpose facility, a news release said. Estimated construction cost is $765,000.

Currently the 10,000-square-foot structure consists of education and administrative wings, a multipurpose room where worship services are held, and a kitchen. A 450-seat sanctuary and a family life center are the next two phases of construction planned.

Seaside held its first worship service in its new facility July 5, 1992, after having been chartered in January 1989. The 275-member congregation has started several programs since moving into a permanent location. These include scouting programs for boys and girls, athletic teams and various support groups. According to the release, the grant will further assist in expanding education and parish life for Seaside.
