Symphony Concert Moving To Hatch Auditorium May 10

The local chapter of the North Carolina Symphony Society isn't taking any chances.

The North Carolina Symphony will present its May 10 concert in Brunswick County at Hatch Auditorium instead of the Odell Williamson Auditorium at Brunswick Community College in Supply, said Stephanna Tewey, local chapter president.

Construction of the BCC auditorium is behind schedule, with no firm completion date.

Tewey said bus transportation will be available from western Brunswick County to the 8 p.m. concert at Hatch Auditorium, which is located on the grounds of the N.C. Baptist Assembly at Fort Caswell on Oak Island. More information is available from Gelene Russ, 754-6237.

Individual tickets for the concert are still available at local chambers of commerce for those who do not have season subscriptions. Tickets are $10 for adults and $9 for senior citizens and students.

The symphony will also present two concerts for Brunswick County students on April 30.
