

Team Shakes 11-Pound Jinx By Catching...Zip!

BY JAMIE MILLIKEN

The black cloud that has rained on the parade of the Caribbean Soul Fishing Team in each Sun-Fun King Mackerel Tournament certainly has not lifted. As I told you last week, we were determined to shake the 11-pound jinx of tournaments past. Guess what—we shook it all right. We didn't catch a single pound. I was "ticked to the highest peak of tickatvity!"

CAPTAIN JAMIE'S OFFSHORE FISHING REPORT

Friday morning Brant McMullan, Eric Carlson and I checked out of Lockwood Folly Inlet, and we were greeted by some nice three-foot southwest swells. I knew this was going to be fun. To make a long story short, we didn't have a strike all day. Nothing!

Saturday morning was even rougher. The sea had built to 5 to 6 feet, and an occasional 8-footer would come along just for entertainment. However, we managed a nice fish. A nice 30-pound cobia fell victim to one of our live baits. Boy, was I glad to see him! He will at least provide some great meals at the McMullan and Milliken homes.

The Brunswick County fishermen were saved as one of our own mustered a nice fish to place in the top ten of this even. Dr. Mushtaq Khan and Gerald Brown teamed together to land a 21.90-pound king on Saturday. Their two days of fishing were similar to ours in that they were not having any action either. At 12:35, their luck changed.

I heard that Mushtaq was so excited after Gerald gaffed the fish that he was purely doing the war dance on the deck of the Mirage. I know the feeling, Doc. It's a great one!

Their fish not only won them sixth place, but also won the Hydra-Sport Manufacturer's Award. Way to go, Mirage!

The Gulf Stream fishing is still extremely hot. The Wrightsville Beach Blue Marlin Tournament was held last week, and some mighty big blues were landed. There were several in the high 300-pound range, and the winner was over 400 pounds.

There were scores of yellowfin tuna landed all week long. Most of the hot spots were in the "Steeple" area 15 miles beyond Frying Pan light tower.

The next king mackerel tournaments are scheduled for July. July 9-10 will be "Cap'n Jamie's Jolly Mon King Classic." The captains' meeting is Friday, July 9, at 6 p.m. at Sharky's Pizza on the Causeway at Ocean Isle Beach.

The 14th annual Carolina Beach "Got-'em-on" Tournament is scheduled for July 23-25. The captains' meeting is at the boat harbour on Friday, the 23rd, at Carolina Beach.

Well, that just about wraps up this week, and my blood pressure is slowly getting back to normal. So until next time, good fishin' and good luck, "Jolly Mon."

Anglers Pull In Spots, Flounder

BY DOUG RUTTER

Local fishermen enjoyed decent catches of spots and flounder over the weekend, but windy conditions spoiled a lot of plans for offshore angling.

"The weather didn't cooperate real well," Jesse Hayes of Captain Pete's Seafood at Holden Beach said Monday. Strong winds created rough seas most of the weekend.

Before the winds picked up last week, Hayes said fishermen had been catching a lot of king mackerel. Most of them weighed about 8 to 12 pounds each.

"Seems like the whole world's turned to dolphin," Hayes noted. Anglers caught a lot of dolphin about 30 miles offshore. A 25-pounder was brought in last week.

Inshore, Hayes said fishermen have been catching mostly spots, croaker and flounder.

FISHING REPORT

"We've never really had a good run of spots," he said. "They've been pretty scattered."

Hayes said anglers are starting to pick up flounder in the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, but many of the fish are under the legal size limit of 13 inches. "They'll catch six and be able to keep two, something like that."

Sea Mist Camping Resort

Barbara Scott of Sea Mist Camping Resort at Brick Landing said fishermen caught lots of spots and flounder last week.

Spots were caught using red worms for bait. Duncan Ivey of Wilmington also caught spots, bluefish and Spanish mackerel on shrimp and minnows.

Some of the flounder were caught

BRUCE BRYANT of York, S.C., caught this 8-pound triggerfish recently on the Super Salty I.

by unconventional means. A Chadborn youth caught a 15-inch flounder in his crab pot.

"His daddy went out on a boat to fish," Scott said. "He caught more than his daddy did."

Ocean Isle Marina

"The fishing isn't too bad right now," Adam Colangelo of Ocean Isle Marina reported Monday. "It's starting to pick up a little bit."

Anglers have been catching Spanish in the surf and flounder inshore. King mackerel have been caught about 8 to 10 miles outside.

Pier Fishing

Pier fishermen caught spots, blues and whiting last week, but there's not as much activity at the local piers as there was a few weeks ago.

One young angler caught a 2 1/4-pound whiting Monday morning at Sunset Beach Fishing Pier.

Fishermen landed lot of spots last week at Sunset, but no king or Spanish mackerel were reported.

"It's been awfully slow," Curtis Williamson of Ocean Isle Beach Fishing Pier said. "It did a little bit on the weekend. They caught a few blues and spots." Williamson hopes the fishing improves. "I don't know what the problem is," he said.

Tire Removal To Resume Off Yaupon

Efforts to retrieve tires that broke loose this spring from the Yaupon Beach Reef and floated into local shrimping waters will resume next week, state officials announced Monday.

The N.C. Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources said Tuesday that it has committed $50,000 to tire removal.

The tires were used to construct the reef in the late 1970s. At the time, tires were considered an excellent reef building material. However, experts now realize that the tires pose major problems and are no longer used for artificial reef construction in North Carolina. As the ties that hold the tires to the reef corrode they tend to break away from the reef and move toward shore.

The severe March 13 storm caused hundreds of the tires to break away from the Yaupon Beach Reef and float inshore, making it impossible for local shrimpers to work a prime trawling area off the reef.

The $50,000 will be used to hire local shrimpers to clear approximately 10,000 tires from this area over the next two to three weeks, opening it to trawling and reducing the numbers of tires that wash ashore on local waterfronts.

Rep. David Redwine said Tuesday that he contacted the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries and its parent agency, the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources asking them to "find" more money for tire removal.

He had been contacted by several local shrimpers concerned about the tires blocking use of the trawling area.

There are still thousands of more tires attached to the Yaupon Beach Reef, he said.

ROGER STEVENS of Danbury landed this 11-pound dolphin during a recent trip aboard the Alice E out of Holden Beach.

Yaupon Teen Wins Sun Fun

Wally Trayah, a 15-year-old from Yaupon Beach, caught the winning fish in the Sun Fun Natural Light King Mackerel Tournament last weekend.

The 35.65-pound king was caught aboard Easy Times, captained by Charles Wilson of Yaupon. The fish was worth $13,000, including $3,000 for the youth angler and early entry awards.

Other local fishermen finishing in the money included Khan Mushtaq of Supply, who placed seventh with a king weighing 21.9 pounds. He won $750 aboard the Hydrasport, plus a $500 boat manufacturer award.

Harold J. Matthews of Leland finished 12th overall with a 20.9-pound mackerel landed aboard the Sundance. Matthews won $750, plus the $500 award presented by the Oak Island Fishing Club.

Also winning $750 was Charles Shore of Long Beach. Fishing on the Team Reaction, Shore placed 25th with a 12.75-pounder.

Gary Tatum of Southport was 38th overall with a king mackerel weighing 11.40 pounds. He won $500.

Wayne Hill of North Myrtle Beach, S.C., won the $500 Brunswick County Fishing Club award for a king weighing 10.9 pounds.

The annual fishing tournament was held Friday and Saturday out of five area inlets including Southport and Lockwood Folly.
