Spots Biting At Piers Over The Weekend

BY DOUG RUTTER

Local pier fishermen enjoyed good catches of spots over the weekend, and the run continued into Monday morning.

"The fish really bit this weekend," Curtis Williamson of Ocean Isle Beach Fishing Pier said. "Saturday they toted them off by the coolerful."

After a week of 90-degree temperatures, Williamson said cooler weather over the weekend helped the fishing.

"We had a great weekend. The pier was full and the people were catching fish," he said. "I'd say we've done more this weekend than we did the whole year so far."

Besides spots, anglers also caught some blues last week at Ocean Isle Pier. One fisherman caught a 28-pound king mackerel.

Williamson was hoping the good fishing would last. "The people are piling in today. It looks like we're going to have a good week."

Anglers also were pulling in spring spots down the road at Sunset Beach Fishing Pier. "The spots are biting real good," said manager Ed Kayler. "They caught a few flounder and some whiting last week."

Sheffield's

The changing weather may have helped pier fishermen, but it put a kink in offshore fishing, according to John Sheffield of Sheffield's store at Ocean Isle Beach.

"It'll pick up when the weather levels off," he predicted Monday. "All of these fronts keep coming through. The fish don't know which way to go."

Sheffield said fishing was "not too sporty" last week. "There's a lot of people fishing, but they ain't catching too much."

Offshore anglers pulled in a few king mackerel, barracuda and Spanish mackerel. Fishermen caught a lot of small flounder inshore.

"There wasn't any of those doormats or anything," Sheffield said, adding that surf fishing has been slow.

Hughes' Marina

Fishermen caught Spanish mackerel and a few kings offshore last week, said John Watkins of Hughes' Marina at Shallotte Point.

Anglers also landed some cobia about 25 miles outside and some dolphin 57 miles offshore.

"It's definitely getting better," Watkins said. "They've not been catching any spectacular. Everybody's catching a little something."

Brunswick Waters Closed To Trawling

The Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway has been closed to shrimp and crab trawling between Southport and the South Carolina state line.

The N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries closed the waterway Sunday to protect small brown shrimp in the area.

Also closed was Bonaparte Creek from the waterway to Little River Inlet.

Doctor's Light-Tackle Fishin' Stories The Best

BY JAMIE MILLIKEN

Last week I had the opportunity to talk a little fishin' with a fellow that exemplifies the title "sportfisherman." Dr. Ronald Gliniski of Whiteville has certainly earned that title. Dr. Gliniski fishes out of Ocean Isle Beach on his 25-foot Boston Whaler Stream Team.

CAPTAIN JAMIE'S OFFSHORE FISHING REPORT

Each spring he heads to South Florida to do a little light tackle fishing. It is this light tackle that truly sets him apart from the average fisherman. His line of choice is 8-pound test "Ande." That's right, the normal test for freshwater fisherman in their pursuit of bass and bream. The species that Dr. Gliniski stalks are those hard-fighting, line-peeling, drag-singing inhabitants of the Gulf Stream.

His list of credits on this type tackle is impeccable. Scores of sailfish were hooked up on this year's trip, with eight of them successfully tagged and released! I was still scratching my head while my "mind's eye" was picturing a greyhound sail attached to the reel with only 8-pound test line when he started on the lemon shark story.

It seems a 200-pound lemon shark became interested in their live bait offering, so they promptly went to war with him. According to the good doctor, "You have to be very patient with such light equipment." His patience paid off as the huge shark was tail-roped and brought on board. The captain placed the shark in a 10-foot fish box so that salt water could be circulated through his gills. The shark was transported to the marina, weighed and then successfully released!

Sounds pretty incredible, doesn't it? However, I'm still not through. Here comes the heart-stopper for me. Are you ready?

Okay, everyone knows the kind of fight that tuna fish put up. The closest way I can accurately describe a tuna fight is to picture yourself reeling in a Volkswagen Beetle with its rear bumper hung on the rocks at the bottom of the ocean. It's that tough! Dr. Gliniski's personal best record is a 183-pound yellowfin he landed a few years back on 12-pound test line! This great fish covered more than 4 1/2 miles during the battle.

I don't know about you, but for me, these stories were fascinating. And if you are interested in the art of light-tackle angling, you should give this man a call.

Locally, our offshore fishing is still running strong. Anglers fishing the Gulf Stream waters this weeks have been treated to hot tuna action. Most of the yellowfins are in the 40- to 60-pound class. Whoos are still plentiful. Average catches of 40- to 50-pounders seem to be the rule of thumb.

The kingfish are beginning to stock up in strong numbers in the 25-mile range. The Spanish mackerel are still somewhat spotty in the fact that they are not schooling up along the beaches as they have in years past.

It reminds me of a line from that old song, "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down." The songwriter refers to Sherman's devastating march through the South when he wrote:

"You take what you need and leave the rest, but they should have never taken the very best." Just food for thought...

Until next time, good fishin' and good luck, "Jolly Mon."
