St. Luke Membership Meets Capital Pledge Challenge

A young Lutheran congregation about to embark on a major building project received words of encouragement Friday.

The Rev. Dr. Richard Warner, minister of St. James the Fishermen Episcopal Church in Shallotte, was keynote speaker at the kick-off of a capital funds campaign by St. Luke Lutheran Church.

Four years ago the St. James congregation, "small in numbers but large in spirit and dedication," called Warner as its first full-time pastor and embarked on its own faith journey in its mission to serve the South Brunswick Islands area. Easter Sunday 1993, St. James dedicated its new worship facility and renovated church building.

St. Luke is embarking on its own campaign, chaired by Sherry Roseman, to raise its share of the funds needed to build the first phase of a permanent church home on U.S. 17 south of Shallotte. The congregation is temporarily meeting at Shallotte Middle School.

Citing Biblical stories of other faith journeys, Warner urged the group of "pioneers" to press on with faith, vision and commitment in planting a new Lutheran congregation in the South Brunswick Islands.

The Rev. Don Safrit, pastor, said Monday that by Sunday evening members had met the campaign's challenge to commit pledges of $85,000, to be paid over a period of two years, with pledges still expected from additional families.

"With the loans and other help we're receiving from our church, that will give us a beginning," said Safrit, the church's first full-time minister. "We have been successful."

With these campaign results, Safrit said he expects the congregation to receive approval in the near future by the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America Division of Outreach to begin the project. Members are already at work improving drainage of the building site.

The church plans to complete and occupy a multipurpose facility by early winter 1994, with seating for 250 for worship and 200 for fellowship activities.

St. Luke was chartered in November 1989 from a mission congregation that began meeting in early 1988.

Approximately 80 persons attended the dinner meeting Friday catered by the Pilot Club of South Brunswick Islands at the Seaside Station POA building at Sunset Beach.
