

Coast Guard Station Helps 'Blackbarry'

The U.S. Coast Guard Oak Island Station helped escort a boat back to Southport last Friday afternoon after receiving a call that the vessel was taking on water.

Southport police contacted the station around 2:30 p.m. Friday reporting that the "Blackbarry" was taking on water approximately 100 yards off Frying Pan Shoals Light Tower, according to BMCS J.D. Arndt.

The vessel radioed for help, and the station launched its 41-foot boat to assist. The Coast Guard also requested help from Marine Corps helicopter "Pedro" and Coast Guard Cutter "Block Island."

The "Block Island" arrived on the scene first and assisted the crew of the "Blackbarry" until Oak Island's 41-footer arrived. The helicopter was released from the case.

Coast Guard officials determined that water was entering the vessel's stern area, possibly through a crack in the hull, whenever the engines were not engaged, Arndt said.

The 41-footer escorted the "Blackbarry" back to Southport. Coast Guardsmen monitored the bilge pump, which kept up with the incoming water as long as the boat kept moving forward.

Arndt said Oak Island station responded to two calls on the afternoon of Nov. 15, including one involving a disabled boat off Shallotte Inlet with two people on board.

The Brunswick County 911 Center contacted the Coast Guard at 5 p.m., and the Oak Island station launched its 44-foot boat to assist.

Holden Beach rescue personnel reported a short while later that the disabled boat was on the beach. The two people suffered from mild hypothermia but did not go to the hospital for treatment, Arndt said.

Earlier in the day, the Coast Guard received a call from the Southport Police Department regarding a 31-foot vessel that ran aground in the vicinity of Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway marker No. 1.

After failing to locate commercial assistance, the station launched its 44-footer to investigate the situation and see if the crew of the "Ripple II" wanted to be removed from the grounded boat.

Before the Coast Guard arrived on the scene, a private boat, "Integrity," helped refloat the "Ripple II."

Supewoman: Are You Invincible—Or Not?

Presenter Laura McLamb will explore the roles of women in a Dec. 7 seminar for the Brunswick Community College Small Business Center.

The free seminar will meet from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the ALS Building on BCC's main campus near Supply.

"Supewoman: Are you invincible or are you not?" is the seminar's title.

Pre-registration is required by calling 754-6900, 343-0203 or 457-6329, or by facsimile, 754-7805.
