PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Area Students Have Poem Published

Waccamaw Elementary School eighth grade students Erica Minton and Tiffany Skaggs collaborated on a poem, "Our Dream World" recently chosen for publication in a competition sponsored by The National Library of Poetry, Owings Mills, Md.

MINTON SKAGGS

The two said last week their effort had received an Editors Choice Award for outstanding achievement in poetry, placing in the top 3 percent of all entries, "just a few people away from the money." It will appear in a volume of poetry titled "Whispers in the Wind," published by the contest sponsor.

"Our Dream World" describes an Earth without hunger, war, illness, homelessness or pollution, and where all are equal.

Caroon Elected

C.B. "Cash" Caroon of Southport has been elected to the North Carolina Fisheries Association Board of Directors to represent the Southport District.

Caroon, owner of Caroon Crab Co. in Southport, was elected at the fisheries association's 41st annual meeting held recently in Atlantic Beach.

A former chairman of the North Carolina Marine Fisheries Commission, Caroon is also a former mayor and alderman in Southport.

The N.C. Fisheries Association is a non-profit trade group that represents the state's commercial fishermen, seafood dealers and processors.

Christmas Gift For EMS

The Calabash Volunteer Emergency Medical Service gets a Christmastime donation from the Myrtle Beach Duplicate Bridge Association, many of whose members live in the Calabash area. Pictured, from left, are T.J. and Brenda Morgan, owners of The Loft at Calabash, where the club plays; Lina Angstadt, acting squad leader; and Al Norwood, bridge association vice-president. In a letter, the association expressed its wish to "help health crisis workers continue to provide their much-appreciated emergency medical service to the Calabash area community."

17 Trained As Reading Tutors

Seventeen North Brunswick High School students trained Nov. 17 to become volunteer literacy tutors.

Trainer Joan Altman of the Brunswick County Literacy Council conducted the workshop for Students Tutoring and Reading (STAR), a program initiated by the Leland area high school earlier this fall.

The high school students travel to nearby Leland Middle and Lincoln Primary schools to provide tutoring to younger students who wish to improve their reading skills.

In addition to tutoring in the schools, some of the high school students will work with students in the community.

New tutors are Rhonda Clemmons, Kerri Edge, Jazmin Capezza, Kimberly Batson, Si Lee, Kaniecewa Ballard, Shavon Suggs, Ammaul Knox, Christopher Rice, Valerie Barajas, Allison Bloodworth, Meagan Miller, Samantha Squires, Anika Walker, Shauna Turner, Esther Lee and Shaderika Willis.

Anyone interested in becoming a tutor with the Brunswick County Literacy Council is asked to call the council's office at 754-7323, or write BCLC at P.O. Box 6, Supply, N.C. 28462.

The council tries to keep a bank of tutors trained at all times so that students and tutors can be successfully matched. At present more than a dozen students are in need of tutors in various communities across the county.
