Thorsen, Hewett Seek Dist. 1 Seat

Two Brunswick County neighbors and natives are vying for the District 1 seat on the Brunswick County Board of Education.

Democrat Olaf "Bud" Thorsen and Republican Rozell Hewett both live in the Shallotte Point area.

Thorsen defeated District 1 incumbent Thurman Gause in the May primary for his party's nomination, while Hewett was unopposed for the Republican nomination. School board candidates run from the district in which they reside, but are elected by voters countywide. The winner on Nov. 8 will serve a two-year term.

Here are their responses to three questions asked by The Brunswick Beacon.

1. What specific steps do you think the school system should take to generate more interest in education among Brunswick County parents?

"I don't know," is Hewett's candid reply. "But maybe we could enforce laws on the books, such as making parents responsible for their children's education up to a certain age."

Thorsen offers four ideas: encourage more parent-teacher conferences, schedule classroom visitation days and semiannual school open houses, and possibly establish a homework hotline so that parents can call and check on their children's assignments.

2. Both the general public and county officials say they have trouble understanding the school system budget ($52 million this year) and in determining how responsibly the school system uses the money it receives from the federal, state and county governments. What do you think the Brunswick County Board of Education should do to make the budget easier to understand and to be more accountable for the money it spends?

Hewett advocates the board developing a line item budget and making it public.

Thorsen believes the school system should take the budget to the public through a series of forums and "explain it so the public can better understand where the money is spent" and also explain how much money is received from each source.
