

Fall Fun Day

Meredith Stanley and Joey Granados ride "Jesse," held by Ann Lohr, as part of "Fall Fun Day" celebrated Oct. 28 by children and staff of For Kids Only Child Development Center in Shallotte. Children enjoyed hay rides and horse rides as well as games such as a roll-the-pumpkin relay race. The morning ended with a hot dog cookout.

Fourth Graders Participate In Colonial American Life

Brunswick County fourth grade students caught a glimpse of 18th century lifestyles last week during the annual Heritage Days program at Brunswick Town State Historic Site.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings, local volunteers and site staff dressed in 18th century attire to demonstrate some of the crafts and chores common in colonial America.

These include food preparation and cooking, stenciling, toys and games, broom making, basketry, candle dipping and woodworking, said Brenda Marshburn, assistant site manager. Students also learned about period clothing and lifestyles. Students had the opportunity to try their hand at making some of the crafts and demonstrators also answered their questions.

Participating schools were Union, Supply, Bolivia, Waccamaw and Southport elementary schools and Leland Middle School.

Heritage Days is sponsored by the Brunswick County Schools, Brunswick Town State Historic Site Staff, Friends of Brunswick Town and local volunteers.

An agency of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, the historic site is open to the public at no charge. In its heyday Brunswick Town was a prosperous port and center of colonial government. The site is off N.C. 133 between Southport and Wilmington.

Literacy Council Certifies Six Tutors At Workshop

The Brunswick County Literacy Council certified six new volunteer tutors at its recent workshop.

They are Sally Banker of Sunset Harbor, Dona Dale of Boiling Spring Lakes, Betty Herman of Ocean Isle Beach, Chad Shreve of Shallotte, Vicki Slider of Holden Beach and Marie West of Winnabow.

Joan Altman conducted the ten-hour phonics-based workshop Oct. 21-22 at the literacy council office in Supply.

The tutors will work with adults and teenagers who want to improve their reading and writing skills.

For more information about free and confidential reading lessons or volunteer opportunities with the literacy council, call 754-7323 or 1-800-694-7323.
