Food Priority

Food has assumed an "equal priority" with military material, in the opinion of Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture and now Food Administrator, who appeals to the farmers of the nation to step up the production of food as much as possible.

Mr. Wickard points out that military and Lend-Lease needs have increased from thirteen to twenty-five per cent. of our total food production during the past year. He urges farmers to redouble their efforts as "a patriotic duty" and while not promising "any complete solution" to the farm labor problem, pledges himself to do everything possible to alleviate the situation and give the farmers as much help as possible.

The Secretary pointed out that during 1943, the conversion of the nation's farms to war production must be completed, with production concentrated on essential crops and products at the expense of the non-essential ones. He especially urges Southern farmers to produce on their own farms sufficient foodstuffs to feed themselves, instead of depending on other sections of the country.

New Years Resolutions

To our way of thinking the best New Year resolution is to resolve that we shall devote every possible effort to win a supreme victory in 1943.

Each and every one of us can make this resolution and have a hand in carrying it out. We all can not fight the battles that will bring that victory but we can fight the problems of the home front that must be fought to insure those who are valiantly carrying the war to the enemy that we are solidly behind them and will see that they have the best of materials and supplies with which to beat down the enemy forces.

We can have a hand in it by buying more and more war bonds and stamps. This war is costing sums of money far beyond the imagination of we average folks, but that money must be raised and we must furnish it. . . . nay, we must loan it, for it will be repaid, and with good interest, too.

We can help win the victory by continuing to turn in scrap metal, old rubber, used tooth paste tubes, and the like. Our production factories have not stopped . . . they are still running and in order to keep running they must have scrap materials of all kinds.

Another step for us to follow in helping to win victory is to abide by the rules our government sets for daily living. Help conserve gasoline and rubber by cutting driving to a minimum. When you do drive take some one with you, help the transportation problem. Buy supplies wisely. If we need supplies and they are obtainable . . . don't overload and thus get some one else's share, but get only your own. In other words, let's not hoard.

There are many, many other ways we all can contribute to winning this war in 1933 . . . these are but a few, but let's resolve to do every thing possible during this coming year that will bring victory and peace.

Bizerte-Fortress

When Secretary Stimson warned Americans to be prepared for news of hard going in Africa, he may have been aware that stay-at-homes were already expressing impatience over the lull which followed the first excitement of the American invasion. The armchair legions may only have had a taste of the test that is in store for them.

Before the Axis is cleared out of Africa, Bizerte must be taken. This is by now probably a formidable fortified city. Some reports describe it as second in strength of all fortresses on the Mediterranean, the first being Gibraltar. At Bizerte the Axis will be fighting defensively but that does not mean the forces there will be at a great disadvantage. There are times when the defense is stronger than an offense, given equal resources and a limited field to hold. The stand of MacArthur's men in the Philippines, the stand of the Russians at Stalingrad—these illustrate the staying power of well-lodged troops.

The present static interlude, and the minor setbacks which American troops have sustained, are occasioned in large part by the fact that the deal with Darlan opened up for swift occupation vast stretches of territory which the military staffs had previously to count on fighting for. The easy advance has placed the armies far ahead of their supplies.

When equipment catches up, Bizerte will begin to feel very uncomfortable, for Axis tenants. But assumptions that it will prove a push-over are liable to be disappointed. The easiest way to fight a war is to expect to fight it the hard way. Relatively short supply routes are available to the Axis. And Bizerte is valuable enough to Hitler to make great Nazi sacrifices seem likely. They will have to be matched with endurance by Bizerte's attackers. — Christian Science Monitor.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
SEEING GOD IN CHRIST

International Sunday School Lesson for January 3, 1943

GOLDEN TEXT: "And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us and we beheld His glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth."—John 1:14.

(Lesson Text: John 1:1-14.)

For the first three months of this year, our lessons will be taken from the Gospel of John. As the reader will probably recall, we had a series of lessons in 1941 taken from what we called the Synoptic Gospels—Matthew, Mark and Luke. The careful student will quickly sense the difference between these three gospels and the gospel written by John.

While Matthew, Mark and Luke tell the gospel story in a simple and beautiful way, the Gospel of John is a dramatized effort to unfold the deeper, underlying meaning of the story. It is full of intimate and personal insight, with flashes of profound spiritual experiences.

This Gospel is considered by many scholars as the greatest of the four gospels. Its language is simple but its meaning is most profound. The author is one who was so familiar with the Jewish faith and ideas and customs that he must have been a Jew, and so conversant with the details he discusses that he must have been an eye-witness of the events themselves. He was the Apostle John, the son of Zebedee, the brother of James, the beloved disciple of Jesus.

John definitely states his purpose in writing his Gospel in verses 30 and 31 of the twentieth chapter. "Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book, but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye may have life in his name."

Its purpose was to emphasize the dual personality of Christ—his divinity and his humanity—by telling of the "signs" and manifestation during his life on earth which bore evidence to his unique personality. John wanted to awaken faith in Jesus as the long-awaited Christ, the Son of God, and also to strengthen the faith of believers in Christ that they too may have life in his name—spiritual life, a life of constant communion with God.

In order to show that Jesus was the Incarnate God, John uses the Greek word Logos (Word), in referring to Jesus. As used in John's day by both Jews and Gentiles, Logos meant the Eternal God is seeking always to reveal himself to men, and that self-revelation is essential to this revelation.

Gaius Glenn Atkins says the devout "believe that it began 'in the beginning' beyond which there is no date at all; always 'the Word was with God and the Word was God,' which is only another way of saying that God has always been seeking to reveal himself to His children and speak to them in a language they could understand.

"John seeks to convey the idea in the Prologue to his Gospel that it was through Jesus that God revealed himself to men—Christ was the full and complete thought (Word) of God—uttered once and for all and expressing the very soul of God. John's sole purpose in writing his Gospel is to prove to the world that Jesus is the Incarnate Logos.

"We put into words what we want others to know of ourselves, our thoughts, our dreams, our hopes, and our purposes; and what others want us to know of themselves, they also put into words; and so, by the magic of language there is established a mutual understanding between us . . . So, in the Fourth Gospel, the word Logos stands for the self revelation of God's love and purpose for His children . . . Jesus Christ is the Word of God, making real among us God's saving love, and he was of the nature of God in the beginning."—Gaius Glenn Atkins.

Therefore, if God was incarnate in Jesus and Jesus was human as well as divine, then God may become incarnate in you and me, if we will let Him. God can come into our lives, too, strengthening us and helping us to live unselfishly and faithfully even as Jesus did.

Our bodies may really become the temples of the living God, wholly dedicated to Him and to His service, if we are surrendered unto Him. For "as many as received Him, to them gave He the right to become the children of God, even to them that believe on His name."

When Your Back Hurts -
 And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pain, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.
