Are Russian Suspicions Based on Fear of Capitalism?

The suspicion that the Russians entertain toward capitalism seems to be real enough. It may be based somewhat upon something like envy of what capitalist countries have achieved in the way of economic well-being. It may originate in Russian faith in communism which involves the assumption that anything that competes is wrong.

The clash of economic ideologies is thus reflected very definitely by the foreign policies of the Soviet Union. Whether the Soviet diplomats believe a war is inevitable or not, they are taking no risks, but vigorously assert the claims of Russia.

They are on the move to obtain advantages now, while the situation is encouraging to them, evidently upon the assumption that no nation becomes weaker by taking profit from a delicate international situation.

We have stated several times that the future peace of the world depends upon the attitude of the leaders of Russia. The Soviet is controlled by a small group of determined men who have the power of directing Russian policy without reference to the wishes of the Russian people. If these leaders are determined to have a conflict, there is no way that the rest of the world can avoid the war.

The situation is dangerous because the Soviet leaders represent something of a dictatorship and, certainly, in the field of foreign affairs, can decide for war overnight. While making every effort to convince the Russians of our friendly attitude, the people of the United States should not overlook the fact that a totalitarian government, whether in Russia, Germany, Italy of Japan, constitutes something of a threat to peace.

This interpretation of Russian policy is further confirmed by the fact that Foreign Minister Molotov, in replying to Secretary of State Byrnes, opposed equal trade facilities for all countries, saying, "It can be used by those who have capital to subjugate others." The idea is clear that the Russian diplomat is afraid of nations with capital to invest and, apparently admits that other nations cannot compete with them.

Government Publicity Programs To Be Combed For Expense Cuts

The "combing" of Government publicity programs will start soon after Congress convenes, declares Representative John Taber, of New York, who is expected to become chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. He intends to cut expenditures by Government departments and agencies for publicity.

There is little reason to doubt that while much of the work is legitimate, there is much that is unnecessary. Opinions will vary as to what part of the Government's educational and informational program is worthy of continuance and what part should be promptly discontinued.

Representative Taber takes the position that the money cost of supporting the small army of public relations men is not of first importance and puts the social cost ahead. This bears out the observation of Geoffrey Bourne, who says that "the supreme task of propaganda" is that it is a "threat of death to reason." Undoubtedly propaganda campaigns, whether conducted by the Government, by economic or other associations, appeal to mass emotions and ignorance, usually presenting half-truths that fit in with the purpose in mind.

The chances are that the interests of the people of this country will be served by putting the axe to some promotional techniques that have been employed by government officials. At the same time, we hope that care will be exercised to pre-because of constipation or faulty digestion? If you feel bilious, sour, bloated with gas, headachy, blue, grouchy, you may be putting too big a burden on your liver. Retained undigested food becomes putrefactive, causes toxins, which overload the liver, keeping it from working properly. Then is the time to relieve your tired liver by letting Calotabs help nature sweep the putrefactive and partially digested matter from your stomach and intestines. Nothing acts just like good old Calotabs. Use as directed. 10c and 25c at your druggist.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. They take up the flowing blood from the rest of the body and filter out the waste products. They are sentinels of health in constantly pouring out into the blood the waste products of the body. When the kidneys fail, a number of Nature's intended functions are out of kilter that may cause serious trouble. Frequent, scanty urination, are sometimes further signs of kidney trouble. The remedy is to get the kidneys working again. Doan's Backache Kidney Pills are the best. They are made of natural herbs and are gentle on the stomach. They are sold in 25c and 50c bottles. Get them today. They are the best. They are the best. They are the best.
