

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BELIEF IN GOD TODAY

International Sunday School Lesson For January 11

Golden Text: "Without faith it is impossible to please him. For whoever would draw near to God must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him."—Hebrews 11:6.

Lesson Text: Isaiah 40:28-31; John 14:8-14.

In our Scripture passages, the first from the Old Testament and the second from the New Testament, we are given a portrayal of God. In chapters 40-55, Isaiah rises to great heights of eloquence "in portraying the incomparableness of God, the universal Creator, the omnipresent Ruler. The eloquence of these chapters is without parallel in the entire literature of the ancient oriental world." (Robert W. Rogers).

Of course, Christ came into the world to be the revelation of the Father God to his children. In practically every reference Christ made to God it was to "My Father," from the first appearance in the temple to meeting with the twelve, when he declared, "I must be about my Father's business," to the last hours upon the cross, when he said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."

Harry Emerson Fosdick has declared, "Christ has given man his loftiest idea of God, not so much by what he said as by what he was. That is an amazing thing to have done. In a world where multitudes have groped after God, guessed about God, philosophized about God, he lived a life of such self-authenticating spiritual grandeur that increasing multitudes of people when they try to think about God can say nothing so true, so satisfying, so adequate, as to say that God is like Christ. That is an amazing thing. He did it."

The world today is hungry for a knowledge of God and it is the mission of the church to bring into the world the facts about God. Henry Luce, in a recent article in The Christian Century, asks, "But are there any facts about God? In the last few decades much of American Protestantism has not only acted but spoken as if there were no facts about God. It is true that our intelligentsia no longer treat religion as if it were, at best, a childish joke, but it pleases them to make a curious distinction between science and religion. Science, they say, is concerned with facts, and religion, by their kind leave is concerned with something they call 'values.' This kind of talk, says Robert Bulkley in The Christian Century, 'is sheer nonsense which would be laughable if it were not so dangerous. Either God exists or he does not exist. That is not a matter of goodness or beauty but of truth... If it is true, Christianity is true; if it is false, Christianity is false, and any attempt to rehabilitate it and use it for its contributions in the field of value are both stupid and dishonest.'

Canon Theodore Wedel, of the Washington Cathedral declares, "An entire generation or more has grown up, even within the churches, who have never heard the true Christian gospel." The cry which Philip uttered, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us," is the cry of hearts today. Jesus would answer today, as he answered Philip of old, "Have I been so long time with thee, and hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father." If one would know God as a reality, one must, of necessity, know His Son, Jesus Christ, the revelation of God to man. To know Jesus really, to see him in all the splendor of power and goodness is to realize the final supremacy of love. His only power was the power of love and love today, if given sway, would conquer in all realms of life. Read again the description of love (charity) which Paul gives in the thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians.

How can God be made real to us? Again quoting from Dr. Emerson Fosdick, "To many people God is only a vague Being in whom they dimly believe, but with whom they have no dealings... nothing is real to us except those things with which we habitually deal. Men say they do not pray because to them God is not real, but a truer statement generally would be that God is not real because they do not pray. In an exclamation that came from the heart of personal religion, the psalmist cried, 'O God, thou art my God' (Psalm 63:1). To stand afar off and say 'O God,' is neither difficult nor searching. We do it when we are giving intellectual assent to a creed, but it is an inward and searching matter to say, 'O God, thou art my God.' The first involves only opinion, the second must be reached by prayer; the first leaves God afar off, the second alone makes him real. To be sure, all Christian service and all insight into history help to make God real to us; but there is an inward certainty of God that can only come from personal communion with God."

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the country's No. 1 crime fighter, calls on the Christian Church to help banish juvenile delinquency. Mr. Hoover's article was prepared at the request of "The Rural Churchman," a paper published by the Episcopal Church in Colorado.

J. Edgar Hoover, Head of Federal Bureau Of Investigation, Calls Church To Curb Crime Says Church Attendance and Crime, Like Oil and Water, Do Not Mix — Unchurched Boys and Girls Are the Juvenile Delinquents Almost Without Exception — Disintegration of Home Greatest Cause of Youthful Crime

At the request of Mrs. E. T. Boyd, editor of The Rural Churchman, published by the Episcopal Diocese of Colorado, J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, expressed his opinions on the problem of crime prevention, and emphasized that churches have an important part to play in this task.

"The churches are in the front trenches of America's crime prevention crusade," Mr. Hoover said. "Never before has there been such a challenging need for aggressive, inspirational leadership among the boys and girls of this country. At the present time only half the youth of America are being reached by the churches, and of those who are being reached, entirely too many are merely 'on the rolls.' This failure to make contact with the bulk of tomorrow's citizens is producing a fertile field for future juvenile crime. If America is to remain a Christian nation devoted to the fundamental ideals of the Beatitudes, the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, then more adults must assume the responsibility of preparing young Americans for virile, dynamic Christian living.

"Church attendance is a vital factor in the Nation's crime prevention program. While serving as Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the past 20 years, I have been profoundly impressed with the fact that the 'church-going-people' are the most substantial group of citizens in the Nation. Church attendance and crime appear to be like the ingredients of oil and water—they do not mix.

"The Churches have an excellent opportunity to fight the causes of crime. These are many and varied—lack of proper parental guidance, lack of wholesome companions, lack of discipline, lack of respect for the rights of others, disregard for parents and constituted authorities, lack of emotional stability. The value of the church in filling many of these needs is obvious.

"Through experience we of the FBI have also observed that those who are active in some church are also the people who seem most interested in establishing a genuine 'home' for their children. The greatest single factor in crime causation among juveniles today is the disintegration of the American home. We need homes where children feel inalienably attached to the family circle, a place where questions are answered, sympathy and affection received and frequent daily family activities promoted which allow expression and participation by every member of the group. We need homes where children learn respect for their parents, respect for law, respect for God and the religious principles which must be perpetuated if America is to survive as a great nation.

"In both church and home children must be made to understand their individual responsibility for personal conduct.

"It has become imperative," said Mr. Hoover in closing, "that every American arouse himself to the urgent necessity of instituting in each community a wide variety of activities, programs and policies designed to counteract the present trend. Respect for law, personal liberty, life and property, must be preached, taught and practiced. There must be a veritable crusade against crime. The churches have a vital task in making contact with our youth, in re-decorating and restoring the American home, in providing inspirational religious leadership, to make America the law-abiding, God-fearing nation our forefathers designed it to be."

SLEEP

Sleep has been called death's twin brother. It is a curious phenomenon that science still knows very little about. We see its effects, and know that the lack of it will finally result in death.

We know that the body renews itself during sleep, and that after a night of dreamless slumber, even if a person goes to bed very tired, all sense of fatigue has vanished when he awakens in the morning, and he gets up to start another day's work with zest and pleasure. It is a fact that by the time a man arrives at the age of sixty, he has spent twenty years in bed. That is one-third of his life.

No one can enjoy perfect health without sleeping well. After a night in bed of tossing, dreaming and fitful sleep one is tired and listless next day. Every one needs at least eight hours of sound unbroken sleep.

Young children need more and should be put to bed around eight o'clock, and allowed to sleep until seven or eight next morning.

The child who is allowed to sit up until ten o'clock or later at night is always more or less nervous and irritable. He does not get enough sleep to recharge his batteries. His vitality is lowered.

One reason why some people sleep so poorly is because they take their troubles to bed with them and get wound up in a maze of thinking. Learn to make your mind a blank as soon as you go to bed. Relax every muscle in the body. If you do this, you will sleep, even though you're to be hung the next day.

There are many causes for sleeplessness. Heavy suppers are conducive to insomnia. A light in the room is not restful; an uncomfortable bed that has a lump in the mattress that sticks in your side is irritating.

It is always better to sleep alone. The tossing of a bedfellow often makes the difference between a night of undisturbed sleep and a wakeful one. The bed should be arranged with reference to the windows, so that the early morning light will not strike the eyes.

A good conscience, a light supper, a comfortable bed and a dark room all to yourself, are great aids to sound sleep.

HELEN GAITHER CLUB MEETS

The Helen Gaither Home Demonstration Club met at the home of the club president, Mrs. Robert White, for its November meeting.

The meeting began with singing a hymn, followed by repeating the club collect. During the business session plans were made for the club's Christmas party and subscriptions were taken for the Parent Magazine. The topic for the month "What Makes a Successful Club Meeting" was given by Miss Frances Maness.

Mrs. Colon Jackson then had charge of the recreation, after which the hos-tes invited the members of the club to the dining room, where a delicious birthday cake was all trimmed with candles. Miss Maness assisted the hostesses in cutting the cake, and jello and salted pecans were also served to the following members: Mesdames Alfred Lane, Colon Jackson, W. O. Hunter, Jesse Chesson, Addie Jones, Milton Dail, Misses Annie Parker and Frances Maness.

"Whether industrialization is the answer to southern economic problems, is still an open question," says Dr. McVay in his introduction. "But long strides were made toward increased industrialization during the recent war... It is because the South is still rural in character, but changing rapidly as industrialization proceeds, that a study of the effect of industry upon agriculture is important at this time."

One of the first findings of the survey was that even in 1943 when the farm labor force was low, many farm families in the survey counties were under-employed. Dr. McVay observes that, "other things remaining equal, employment could not be given to this unused labor simply by increasing the cropland acreage alone." In other words, if the farm family was to be fully employed it has to depend at least partly on nearby rural industries.

Many of the off-farm employment opportunities offered low wages and has few seasonal variations in labor needs that matched fluctuations in the farm labor supply. Nevertheless, these opportunities helped considerably in raising the income of farm families.

In his summary, Dr. McVay reaches the conclusion that more rural industries would certainly improve the plight of farm families. "The part-time farmer, who at present ekes out a living from farm and factory, might leave farming entirely if he could find full-time off-farm work at higher wages," the economist concludes. "Higher non-farm incomes would undoubtedly raise the incomes of full-time farmers who remained on the farm. This would, in turn, enable them to finance more mechanization and thus step up their efficiency and income."
