and tolerance Senator Lumsford Crewe, of Halifax County, told the Albemarie Schoolmasters' Club at its November meeting held Monday night in the cafeteria at Central Grammar School, North Carolina can find the answer to the problem of segregation if "out-siders" will leave the people alone to work out a solution

Senator Crewe, a member of the Governor's Committee on Educa-tion told the Schoolmasters of the work of the committee and how it had approved the proposal of voluntary segregation as now supby the Governor and the neral Assembly.

Stating that he believed voluntary segregation to be a means of preserving public education in North Carolina Senator Crewe pointed out the NAAP has cited the City of Baltimore as a site where integration is working but he stated these are not the facts. Giving W. N. Matthews, Jr., and Johnny figures from a report by the Superintendent of Schools of Baltimore, Senator Crewe said that city has 170 schools of which 45 are all

Between 500 and 600 people attended the centennial celebration at the Hertford Methodist Church last Sunday, when the church observed its 100th year of service to this community. Many members and visitors from distant points assembled to join in the celebration and refresh their memories of former days and enjoy the get-together which featured a sermon by the Rev. M. Y. Self, former pastor of the church.

The centennial celebration opened at 11 A. M., during which special music was rendered by the church choir. Following the sermon by the Rev. Mr. Self brief messages were delivered by the Rev. D. M. Sharpe and the Rev. B. C. Reavis, also former pastors of the church.
