appeal (in Chapter 12), based upon the record of achievements of faith described in Chapter 11. Borrowing a metaphor from the Greek games, the writer depicts the Christian life as a race in the amphitheatre. He describes the setting for the race—the arena surrounded by tiers and tiers of seats which are thronged with spectators watching the various contests, and cheering for their favorites. The conditions for the race are depicted. The runners throw off all their superfluous garments so that they may be free to run without encumbrance.

To succeed in the Christian life, the hampering effects of sin must be cast aside and one must keep one's eyes on Jesus Christ—the goal. So, the person who looks to Jesus in faith for salvation must also look to him as the goal to wards which he is striving.

Business At Crossroads—The Steel Strike—U. S. Diplomatic Blunder—Reds Eye Keflavik

Washington—It is apparent that U. S. business is at the crossroads. Chances are excellent that the nation will experience a prolonged steel strike—in progress as this is written—and that a settlement may cause another round of inflation. If the price of steel is again hiked to compensate for whatever reasons steel workers get, which is always the case, then prices may rise on automobiles, kitchen hard goods, and many other steel-influenced hard goods.

Employment is now high, with 65,000,000 working and take-home pay growing, but take-home averages for industrial workers have dropped slightly in recent months, and the trend may or may not be reversed, in the next few months.

Business looks good for retail merchants and chains and for grocery stores and dry goods stores. Building is also booming. But despite large stocks of steel held by some automobile companies, a pinch could develop if the steel strike continues for a considerable length of time.

And other industries may be affected sooner. Economists disagree on the direction the economy is headed. There are indications credit restrictions will be soon eased and the soil bank program may be of some value to farmers this year. But the crux of the economic picture is to be farming and industrial developments in the next few months.

A good year is almost imperative for farmers if the farm economy is not to continue to exert a drag on expansion of the national economy. Developments between now and November will answer this question.

A pickup in the automotive and hard goods field, coupled with a farm incline, might make for an inflationary trend of very good business. It's true that farm income has become a relatively small part of the economy but it still is a major influence. Farm prices have started up, and if they continue in this direction, it will be highly significant.

New models are expected to pep up the automobile industry after the strike. With inventories building up, and consumer credit on the rise, the steel strike may not have too much of an adverse effect on the economy after all—if it is terminated within a reasonable time.

One of the little-known stories of U. S. foreign policy is the story of a U. S. blunder concerning Iceland, where we are now about to lose our big Air Force base, Keflavik.

Keflavik is on a direct route line to Moscow and is nearer Moscow than it is to New York. In fact, it is only about four hours, or less, from the Russian capital, as measured in speeds obtainable on today's bombers.

Russia moved in on the economic scene, in Iceland, four years ago and began to buy Iceland's fish, the major export. A dispute with Great Britain over fishing rights in various waters ended with Russia's stepping in and becoming Iceland's biggest customer.

The United States was also not unaware of what might happen. The State Department knew that it would be smart for this country to lower its import bars a bit on Iceland's fish, in the interest of better international relations.

This country has already put many millions of dollars into the big Keflavik base, and it is one of the world's finest. But ever since Russia moved in on Iceland's economy to such an extent it has been only a matter of time until the Reds attempted to cause trouble, to run us out of that country.

They appear very near final success now. U. S. business interests refused to support proposals to allow more fish from Iceland to be sold in this country. Yet we used to buy a major part of Iceland's exports—far more than the Communists. And that was as late as 1954! Today the percentage of Iceland's products we buy has dropped from 24 to 12 per cent. The Reds have moved into the vacuum.

And now they are strong enough to have Iceland's parliament demanding a withdrawal of U. S. troops and fighters—which will probably have to be done in the near future.

Ring Your Own Bell

A man returning home in the early hours saw a notice on a factory door. It read: "Please ring the bell for the caretaker?"

He gave the bell a terrific pull, nearly dragging it from its socket. Shortly a sleepy face appeared.

"Are you a caretaker?" asked the man.

"Yes," came the reply, "What do you want?"

"I just want to know why the dickens you can't ring the bell yourself?"
