Farmers, Commercial Growers Warned Against Illegal Child Labor Employment

Farmers and commercial growers whose produce is sold or shipped in any form out of the State are cautioned to check carefully the ages of youngsters hired to tend their spring crops.

This advice, timed to coincide with the spring strawberry harvest, came from State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane, who administers the Federal Wage and Hour Law in North Carolina under special agreement with the U. S. Department of Labor.

Commissioner Crane pointed out that farmers can avoid conflict with the Federal law by obtaining and keeping on file age certificates from all youngsters employed by them.

"Under the Fair Labor Standards Act (Federal Wage and Hour Law), boys and girls must be at least 16 to work on farms during school hours," Crane said. "The law applies to children of migrant families, as well as local residents. It does not apply, however, to children employed on their parents' farms, or by a farmer whose crops are sold and consumed wholly within the State."

The child-labor provisions of the Act protect the rights of farm children to an education, Crane stated. He cited U. S. Labor Department figures for last year, showing that out of the 5,500 American children found working illegally on farms throughout the nation, over half were below the normal grade for their age in school. More than fifty per cent of these children were between 10 and 13 years of age, and twenty per cent still younger, the Labor Commissioner said.

"I am sure that the parents and teachers of North Carolina will gladly cooperate with the farmers in helping to prevent illegal employment of children," Crane declared. "Certificates of age can be obtained from local County Welfare Superintendents."

Commissioner Crane noted that the Federal child labor provisions apply to a farmer, whether he himself ships the products out of the State, or whether he delivers them to a warehouse or wholesaler who handles the interstate shipment. Fruit and vegetable growers who sell to canneries or processing plants have the same obligation under the law not to employ children under 16 during school hours. Those in doubt about the application of the law should consult the North Carolina Department of Labor at Raleigh for an authoritative answer to their problem.

KNOW YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

P. E. Bettendorf, representative of the Social Security Administration, is in Edenton every Thursday at the North Carolina Employment Security Commission in Citizens Bank Building.

Mrs. Mary W., 23 years old and the mother of 3 small children, lost her husband last September. Mr. W. was 34 years old at the time of his death and had been an engineer with a large manufacturing company. Mary was the beneficiary of a $7500 insurance policy and there was a bank account of less than $1,000.

On the other side of the ledger there was a $7,000 mortgage on the house she and her husband had purchased just two years before. Mary, in thinking about her situation, decided she would have to arrange day care for the children, a boy of 7, and two girls, 5 and 2 years of age, and find a job. Later on, she realized, she might have to sell the house, but she put that decision out of her mind for the moment.

It was not until just this week, eight months after her husband's death, that Mary even considered one valuable asset—her husband's social security. When she called at her local social security office, Mary found that she and the children were eligible for social security survivors benefits of $200 a month, based on her husband's earnings under social security.

With her first check, she and the children will also receive back payments for the months of September to February, and in addition, she will be paid a lump-sum death payment of $255. Monthly payments of $200 will come to Mary and her children for 13 years, until the 5 year old reaches 18. For the following 3 years, until her youngest girl is 18 years of age, monthly benefits of $162.50 will be payable to the family. Payments will stop at that time, but when Mary reaches 62, if she has not re-more commonly called, is a family program, but in the minds of most people, the term social security has unfortunately become synonymous with old-age and retirement. Relatively few young married people are aware of the protection afforded the family of a young worker. Although most parents of young families will live to see their children grown and self-supporting, knowledge of this family protection can help them to plan more intelligently for the future and may be of great comfort in time of stress.

Easy

"Don't you find it hard to meet expenses?"

"Hard. Man alive! I meet expenses at every turn."

Irony

In a crowded theater a young woman brushed past a man about to take a seat. Before he recovered his balance the young woman and her husband had taken the only two seats available in that part of the movie house.

"Sorry," said the husband, "we just beat you."

"That's OK," said the man who had been pushed out. "I hope you and your mother enjoy the show."

... on earth, as it is in Heaven. In worshipping God we feel close to him; we identify ourselves more closely with him, and with his purpose. Worship gives us the opportunity to become co-workers with God in the greatest and most rewarding of all tasks—the work of Kingdom-building.

Let us, then, worship God; let us commune with him, and, having communed, let us go forth and strive with all our might to live a Christian life.

MARGARET SCOTT WHITE

We the members of the WMS of Piney Woods Friends Church wish to pay loving tribute and deepest respect to the memory of Margaret Scott White, who entered eternal life on February 11, 1958. She was the daughter of the late Josiah and Ellen Brown White and for many years was faithful in caring for them in their years of poor health.

In the last two years of her life she was not able to attend meetings, very much, but was always willing to share in her responsibility. She was teacher in public schools for 43 years and children who were under her care speak of her as one who tried so hard to help them.

In sincere appreciation of faith and loyalty we bow in humble submission to the Divine Will and extend to the family and relatives our deep sympathy and commend them to God.

Beautiful life is that whose span is spent in duty to God and man. Beautiful twilight at set of sun. Beautiful death with a life well done.
