Tar Heel Farmers Will Make Highly Important Decisions

North Carolina farmers will make five important decisions on November 25 and December 15. They will troop to the polls and vote in corn, cotton, tobacco, and peanut referendums that will have a great deal to do with the prospects of these crops in the coming years.

On November 25 farmers will choose between two corn programs, and on December 15, tobacco and cotton quota programs will be decided. Also on December 15, tobacco and peanut growers will decide whether to continue to assess themselves for the promotion of their crops.

Every agricultural leader in the state is urging every eligible farmer to vote. And a great deal of effort on the part of many people will be expended between now and the voting dates to make sure every farmer is familiar with the issues involved.

Harry B. Caldwell, master of the North Carolina State Grange, and A. C. Edwards, executive vice president of the N. C. Farm Bureau Federation, for example, are so concerned that they have initiated a special information program—which they hope will produce the biggest farm commodity vote in the state's history.

Reasons for the great information effort are: the obvious importance of the vote to North Carolina agriculture; and complexity of the issues to be decided.

In the November 25 corn referendum growers in the state's 32 commercial corn counties will vote either to continue the present ASC corn program which provides price supports from 75 to 90 per cent of parity, or a new program which provides for no acreage allotments and no designation of commercial corn counties. Under the present program the minimum support rate is 75 per cent of parity; under the new program the minimum would be 65 per cent of parity.

In the December 15 cotton referendum growers will decide whether they want marketing quotas with supports of between 65 and 80 per cent of parity along with penalties for over-planting or no marketing quotas and over-planting penalties with 50 per cent of parity supports.

If the cotton referendum doesn't carry there will be no quotas, no

Most of his project work has been in peanuts. This was his first try at growing corn. From one acre of corn Donald grew 169.17 bushels after the deduction for moisture.

Donald selected Pioneer 309B as his variety and fertilized with 500 pounds of Amour Vertgreen 5-10-10, also he used 90 pounds of nitrogen from urea source or about 300 pounds of 30 per cent urea. He also used 200 pounds of soda. The corn was grown on 38-inch rows, using 8-inch plates. The corn was harvested after F. A. McGoogan, soil conservationist, measured the acre. Joe Nowell picked the corn with his self-propelled corn picker. A. D. Stuart, agronomy specialist from North Carolina State College was on hand to witness the picking and weighing of the corn.

On November 28, 1958, Donald and his parents will attend the State Recognition Day in Raleigh and on Saturday, November 29, he will leave for the National 4-H Club Week in Chicago, Illinois.
