

SCHOOL AND YOUR CHILD

By John Corey, Appalachian State Teachers College

YOUR SCHOOL and Child — 1. Jan. 6, age 12, wants to wear jeans.

Her mother says, "I think you're too young. Let's wait until you're 15."

Father says, "I agree."

Janie says, "All the other girls' parents allow them to use lipstick. Why do you always have to be so different and make me unhappy?"

She'll probably wear the cosmetic, even though her mother and father think it's not best.

They don't want the group to reject their daughter. They don't want to stymie their daughter's normal development, which will happen according to some popular psychological theories they've read about if parents forbid their children to do what others are doing.

This modern parental philosophy has guided many parents to decline to set standards of conduct and taste in art, literature, music, dress and behavior.

The result of this line of thinking has caused a noticeable drop in many young folks' standards, observes Dr. Roy Blanton, principal of the laboratory high school on the campus of Appa-chian State Teachers College, Boone, N. C.

Too many kids under their own direction have gone for horror and sex movies, read comic books, wear skin-tight blue jeans, rebel against teacher authority, act in a sassy manner and thumb-nose, in general, cultural pursuits.

The situation has caused many mothers and fathers to take a hard look at themselves and their methods of dealing with their offspring, says Dr. Blanton.

Some have resolved that the old-fashioned techniques still have merit — parents setting their own standards for children, refuse their going along with the crowd if the crowd is wrong, insist on courtesy, even "jar the seat of their pants" if it takes that to put across a point.

The parents admit that this philosophy may cramp their kiddie's personality development and even make them unhappy at times, says Dr. Blanton.

But at least the youngsters will know where their parents stand, what they think is right and wrong, and when their children grow into adults, they can decide for themselves what's best. But, they won't be able to say they didn't know what their parents thought was right.

Then to the many that have remembered with prayers, flowers, visits, food, phone calls and notes of sympathy, we are most grateful. Each kind deed that was done helped lighten our load in our sorrow. Tobacco is big business in North Carolina. About 44 percent of our cash farm income is derived from tobacco alone, and 58 percent of all cigarettes made in the United States are manufactured within our borders. So whether you smoke "King-size" or regular, filtered or non-filtered cigarettes, chances are good that you are using—and enjoying—a North Carolina product.

Just as our farmers favor tobacco production controls, people throughout the state favor the system of "legal control" of the sale of beer and ale as being in the best interests of all concerned.

Read what a past president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation says of Mr. Holmes service to farmers in the Legislature.

(COPY)

Macclesfield, N. C.
May 2nd, 1960.

Honorable Carroll R. Holmes,
Hertford, North Carolina.

Dear Mr. Holmes:

As a farmer in Edgecombe County, I am happy to make the following statement concerning your support of agricultural legislation during my tenure as president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation.

First of all, I have observed your general support of all agricultural legislation that would contribute to a better agriculture for North Carolina. I wish to note specifically that you have been a leader in the fight against the unfair sales tax proposals that would levy a tax upon feeds, fertilizers, farm machinery, insecticides, seeds, feeds, and landplaster.

Your support of agricultural research has also strengthened the agricultural potential of Eastern North Carolina.

As a farmer, I wish to express my appreciation for your support of agriculture and the necessity of even greater support in the future, if our farm people are to receive their fair share of income.

Yours truly,

(Signed) W. Randolph Eagles,
Past President, N. C. Farm Bureau Federation.
