Worms Bother Small Grain

Infestation of army worms usually becomes a problem in our small grain about the 20th of May. At the present time, we have not located the insect, but we have seen signs of birds dipping and diving in the small grain, which is an indication of these pests being present.

"Our recommendation for control of these insects are pretty well the same as they have been in the past. We are recommending toxaphene at the rate of 1 1/2 to 2 pounds active to the acre. Many of you have had experience with this particular insect and know the damage it can cause. We hope that you will keep a close check and make sure that they do not destroy your small grain this spring," states R. M. Thompson, County Extension Chairman.
