Hertford All A Glitter With Christmas Decoration

Heriford has donned it's decorations for the Holiday Season. The Christmas street lights are all a-twinkle and the store windows are all a-sparkle, for Sertiord has put on its Christmas garb, and down town has a real festive appearance. Christmas is, as everybody knows, only little more than two weeks off, so it's high time to get ready.

Heriford's stores can hold their own with any town anywhere in holiday goods and novelties, as well as in the usual every day merchandise, and this year every store has displayed prettier gifts, many of them practical things which every one needs.

There hasn't been much hustle and bustle about shopping here yet, the most popular shopping time for Christmas, is a few days before Christmas, or even Christmas ever. As always, some will well for the last few days before Christmas, never seeming to realize that to wait too long is to take what has been left and is not always the choicest.

So, if you haven't done your Christmas shoppin' yet, we'd advise you to get in the swing and do so.

Reporter Snoops On Shoppers

g for a chat or to look at this and that, this reporter got so curious as to what they were buying for Christmas this year, so snooping she went, she parked at a counter where nearby two women were talking Christmas over. One said to the other, what you going to git your husbin for Christmas? The other lady answered, I ain't thought much about it yet, he ain't gimma no money to get nothing wid. Well, since that seemed to be about all of that conversation, the reporter moved on down a counter or two, where three ladies had just congregated. One was asking the old familiar question again, what you going to give your husband for Christmas, the other lady replied, I'm going to give him h --- if he doesn't stop griping about the budget. She must have meant what she said, cause she didn't crack a smile. So out that store and into another, I strolled.

While watching the Christmas | Several ladies were looking at shoppers touring the stores last some mens suits. One said, I'm week, and meeting up with their neighbors and friends and stop- the pockets in the one he is wearing are so ragged it makes picking his pockets hard to do without waking him up. The other said, I'm going to give my husband a train, he has wanted one ever since Richard got his. (Honest folks, I don't know who Richard is, cause I didn't know the people).

On to one of the Hardware Stores I made my way, they seemed to have the biggest crowd. One lady was buying a flashlight, the other asked her who it was for-she said "who's buying it"? So that settled that! Nobody that was shopping, seemed to really be enjoying They acted as the it was a real chore.

Then there was this real sweet looking old lady, she was waiting patiently to get waited on. Finally the clerk approached and asked if he could help her. She said ves. I want a shotgun. He laughed and said, you going hunting, She (See REPORTER Page 8)
