Farm Bureau Will Meet

The election of a new state president will highlight the 39th annual convention of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation in Durham, December 8-11. B.C. Mangum, president of the organization for the past 16 years, announced in October that he would retire at the state convention. Voting delegates, representing each of the 100 county Farm Bureaus, will pick a successor to Mangum.

Delegates will also draft official North Carolina Farm Bureau policies, and make recommendations on national issues. Discussion and action on policy resolutions will begin on Tuesday afternoon, December 10, and resume Wednesday morning.

Mangum will give his annual report to the membership at the Federation's first general session, beginning at 1:30 p.m., Monday, December 9. All convention sessions will be held at the Durham Hotel and Motel.

James Graham, N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture, and Dr. Ed Legates, Dean of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences, N.C. State University, will address the convention on Tuesday morning, December 10.

The election of officers and directors of the Federation will take place on Tuesday afternoon. Delegates to the American Farm Bureau convention in January will also be selected at this time.

Other convention highlights will include several county Farm Bureau awards presentation, and the selection of North Carolina Farm Bureau's "Outstanding Young Farm Family" of the Year.

The state farm organization will also present Distinguished

Area Meet

An area meeting has been scheduled in Edenton on Friday, Dec. 13, to give local people an opportunity to discuss agricultural matters with several administrators from North Carolina State University.

Richard Bryant, Perquimans County extension chairman, said the Edenton meeting has been planned for people of Currituck, Camden, Gates, Dare, Hyde, Pasquotank, Chowan, Perquimans, Washington and Tyrrell counties.

Fourteen such meetings are planned across the state in an effort to improve communications between local citizens and the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU, Bryant explained.

"The NCSU officials will report on what the University is doing in the way of agricultural teaching, research and extension. Local people will have an opportunity to discuss their problems and needs," Bryant added.

Farmers, agri-businessmen and other people with an interest in agriculture are invited. Starting time is 2 p.m. and the place is the fourth floor of the County Office Building.

Representing NCSU will be Dr. J.E. Legates, dean of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences; Dr. E.J. Kamprath, professor of soil science; Dr. E.W. Glazener, director, academic affairs, School of Agriculture and Life Sciences; Dr. George Hyatt Jr., director N.C. Agricultural Extension Service; Dr. Eloise Cofer, assistant director of extension in charge of home economics; Dr. Guy Jones, specialist in charge of extension agronomy; and Dr. J.L. Apple, assistant director of the N.C. Agricultural Experiment Station. Also attending will be Frances Ratcliff, president, N.C. Agricultural Foundation.
