

Making the Move to the Country

Hollowell Oil Company

By Tony Jordan
Two Hertford businesses have left the confines of the city's limits in the past year. Luckily for the residents of Hertford they haven't moved very far away. Hollowell Oil Company and Winslow Oil Company are now located in Winfall.

The reasons for the moves were a number of things. Julian Winslow, owner of Winslow Oil Company, was forced to look for a new location after the fire in January. He is now on Highway 17, less than a mile from the State Highway Department between Hertford and Elizabeth City.

Winslow pointed out that he wanted to be as close as possible to Hertford, yet far away enough not to affect other businesses pending another disaster. This works to everyone's advantage. Since the business is located away from other shops and stores, the insurance rate is not as high. Winslow is able to keep the cost of fuel down although the distance to his customers is a little much farther.

Joel Hollowell, owner of Hollowell Oil Company, has been hoping to move for some time. Only recently has he been able to buy the over 15-acre tract of land across from his other business, Winfall Ready Mix. Coming from Hertford it is located less than a mile past the Perquimans County Central School.

Hollowell stated the convenience was the biggest reason for his moving. He now has the room that is needed for his operation, such as more warehouse and office space. In addition, the business has increased its storage capacity. Asked whether Hollowell Oil will expand, Hollowell stated, "We've got the room."

Hertford is not alone in seeing the oil companies move out of town. Edenton has one of their major oil distributors leave their water front site. Winslow said, "If you do have a fire in town, you can cause a lot of damage." There is no doubt that this is part of the reason for the moving of the companies. People understand only too well the danger present to a small city such as Hertford. Another factor in the moves is the lower tax rates paid in Winfall.

David Trueblood, Mayor of Winfall, stated that taxes for Winfall residents are 30 cents on $100 compared to 65 cents in Hertford. Trueblood said, "The new industry will help the town of Winfall."
