BPW to Sponsor Meet the Candidates Night

The Hertford Business and Professional Women's Organization is sponsoring a "Meet the Candidates" Program on April 12 at the Perquimans County Courthouse at 7:00 p.m.

A United States Senator, the Governor of North Carolina, local candidates and more have been invited to speak. If time permits, a question and answer session will follow.

In these crucial times, we feel it is essential for the person most qualified to be elected to the position they seek. The public is invited to share this evening with the BPW.

BPW to honor Young Careerist

The Hertford BPW will honor three outstanding young women at their annual Young Careerist Banquet on March 15, 1984.

Candidates vying for the honor of being chosen Young Careerist of the Year include Sheri Woodell, legal secretary; Teri Copeland, Job Placement Coordinator Specialist; and Freda Nelson, first grade teacher.

The local winner will compete in district competition on March 31 in Ahoskie.

Farm Management meeting Set

There will be a farm management meeting on Tuesday, March 13, at 7:00 p.m. at the Perquimans County Agricultural Extension Office.

The topic of the meeting will be "How to evaluate my farming business and improve my business practices." Speaker for the meeting will be Dr. Duane F. Neuman, Extension Economist-Farm Management.

"Farming is a business and the practice that you use in this business often influences whether you make a profit or loss," stated Perquimans County Agricultural Extension Chairman Bill Jester. The public is invited to attend.

Band Boosters to Meet

The Perquimans County Band Boosters Club will hold their regular monthly meeting Monday, March 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school library.

Various business items and upcoming events will be discussed. Membership is still open for anyone interested in the band program. Annual membership is $2 per person annually.

AA Meets Thursday Nights

Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon meet every Thursday in the Fellowship Hall of the Hertford United Methodist Church at 8:00 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

PROVE YOUR LOSS

You can help substantiate losses of personal property due to fire, theft, or other casualties by the use of a few simple techniques.

Most of us realize it's a good idea to have a listing of our personal property. Such an inventory should list the property, a description, and approximate market value. If possible, verify the date and cost of acquisition.

While this is a good idea, few of us actually get around to making the inventory. If you don't take the time to prepare an inventory, consider at least spending a few minutes photographing your property (especially that which is the most valuable . . . the stuff that you'd really hate to lose by fire, theft, or other casualty).

Take a few good photographs of your sterling silverware, gun collection, coins, stamps, jewelry, and other valuables. And, while you're at it, shoot all the rooms in your house; don't forget your clothes closets.

Today, almost everyone owns or has access to a tape recorder. So when you get your pictures back, take a few minutes and dictate onto a cassette the description and value of the property that's shown in the photos. Then put both the pictures and the cassette in a safe deposit box at your bank, so they won't be lost in the casualty. If you have a fire, theft, or other casualty, these items will be most helpful in making and proving your insurance claim and/or your loss for income tax purposes.

Consider using this same photo and cassette technique for your business assets. It would be desirable to repeat this process every couple of years for both your business location and your personal residence.

Ask your insurance agent to include a "replacement cost" clause in your homeowner's policy. This will provide, at minimal cost, loss replacements at the current value rather than the old depreciated value.
