IRS AUDITS (How to Handle Them)

A voluntary tax system such as ours uses the audit as a means of achieving compliance with tax laws. Only a small percentage of the millions of returns that are filed are selected for audit. Using a complex scoring system, the IRS computers make the initial selection. A review of these returns by IRS personnel determines which returns will actually be audited.

The most frequent audit is the "correspondence audit" where the IRS asks for clarification or documentation for some item on your return. The "office interview audit" requests that the taxpayer bring supporting documents to an IRS office for review by an agent.

A "field audit," usually used for business returns and more complex individual returns, is conducted on the taxpayer's premises.

Some basic rules to follow to get through any audit as quickly and painlessly as possible include:

1. Be cooperative and business-like. Provide the information requested promptly, but do not volunteer other information.

2. Remember the agent is just doing his job. Don't harangue him with your views on taxes, and never offer him a "gift."
3. If your return was properly prepared, don't be intimidated into paying taxes that you do not owe. Be reasonable, however; there may be points not worth your time and money to argue.

If the audit leaves some issues unsettled, you do have various rights of appeal. You may even take your case to court.

It is advisable to engage professional assistance. You will feel more comfortable knowing that you have an expert on your side, and any fees you pay will be deductible on a later tax return.

How To Tame The Bear.

Bears can be dangerous. Even the Wall Street bear can take a bite out of your financial future. But don't worry. Buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan will let you ignore any bear market. Bonds have a variable interest rate combined with a guaranteed minimum of 7.5%, if you hold them 5 years or more.

So you share in higher returns with the bull, but can't lose to the bear. That's the best of both markets.
