Tip For Vet's Survivors

The Veterans Administration urges veterans who have not done so to advise survivors of benefits they are entitled to from the agency upon the veteran's death. H. W. Johnson, Director of the Winston-Salem VA Regional Office, said this week.

Johnson emphasized that "failure to do so could cause undue anguish during times of great emotional stress."

"It's a good idea for veteran and spouse to sit down and openly discuss important family matters, including locations of that in event of death, the family documents, which deceased family or close would facilitate filing of claims for VA benefits," Johnson suggested.

Johnson also advised that in event of death, the deceased family or close friends should know they can check with veterans service organizations.
