HIGH POINT -- The inspiring story of a former slave who lives to take part in the Civil Rights movement can be seen in a special film to be shown at High Point Public Library on Wednesday, Oct. 23.

Originally made for television, the feature film, "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," will have two showings. The first will be at the main library, 411 South Main Street, at 2 p.m. The second show will be at Washington Street Branch Library, corner of Fourth and Washington Streets, at 6 p.m.

Based on the novel by Ernest J. Gaines, this moving film stars Cecily Tyson as Jane Pittman, who in 1962, while celebrating her 110th birthday, looks back over her life from the time she was a 10-year-old slave on a Louisiana plantation in 1862.

Miss Jane recalls in dramatic flashback, the confusions of freedom after the Civil War, the horrors of Reconstruction, the joy of a brief marriage terminated by tragedy, the martyrdom of a foster son. At the age of 110, she rises to lead a Civil Rights protest march.

"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" lasts for about two hours.

Veterans recently separated from military service should check the timetable on certain benefits to make sure they don't lose out through oversight, the Veterans Administration advises. For example, veterans have 120 days to convert, without physical examination, their Servicemen's Group Life Insurance to the new Veterans Group Life Insurance.

Food Stamp Outreach Program

The Department of Social Services is attempting a new approach in reaching the people of Guilford County. It had become very obvious during the first three months of the Guilford County Food Stamp program, that there are many elderly, disabled, and working poor that lack adequate transportation to get into the main offices in both High Point and Greensboro. In an answer to this need, the Social Service Department has set up outstations at scattered points in the county.

The Outreach Program began in full operation on October 15th and will be running through November 15th, although the outstations are now being viewed

Shaw Radio Station Favors Community Participation

RALEIGH -- While satisfying the radio needs of the students, WSHA radio at Shaw University is attempting to fill voids in community listening left by the commercial stations.

WSHA a non profit, FM station has designed a format designed to educate and entertain their clientele by utilizing persons on the campus and in the community.

"I think the university is supposed to service the community", said Bob Keiber, Shaw's station coordinator. "Somehow we should make a difference."

Keiber, who speaks only in terms of the future, is hoping to make a difference with the format for WSHA. The station has received two grants that will enable it to increase its power from 10 watts to 12.6 watts sometime in October, and set up a carrier current station on the AM dial to service the campus. With the new power, WSHA FM located at 88.9 on the dial could reach at least a 20 mile radius.

Under the new format, Keiber plans to have a program from 6 to 9 a.m. in which residents of the community will call in with problems and questions. Students will research the problems, and the answers will be broadcast the following morning. Keiber said other program topics include black profiles, dropouts and tenant housing. WSHA FM will also carry news oriented to the black community and low key rhythm and blues and jazz music distributed within the program formats.

"What we want to do is provide cultural and educational programs for the black community that will educate white listeners to the black community", explained Keiber.

The carrier current station will follow primarily the same format that the FM station currently has, providing top 40 and soul music and campus news. The station will broadcast to campus building on a system of coaxial cables connecting them to the station.

Keiber places emphasis on the station's role as quasiprofessional training ground for students in radio and television. The station is part of Shaw's Department of Performing Arts and Humanities and is more an extension of the curriculum than an extra-

Dr. S. Proctor To Keynote A&T Black-Tie Dinner

GREENSBORO -- Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, pastor of the world's largest black Baptist Church and a professor of education at Rutgers University, will be the Keynote speaker at the second annual Black-Tie Dinner sponsored by the A&T University Foundation November 15.

The dinner will serve as a salute to the Foundation's individual and corporate supporters. Also to be honored are the three living presidents, including Proctor, a past president; Dr. Warmoth T. Gibbs, president emeritus; Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, the current chancellor.

Other honorees will be members of the Chancellor's Council (persons who have contributed $500 or more annually to the Foundation), and the Chancellor's Scholars.

Marshall Colston, executive secretary of the foundation, said more than 500 persons are expected for the dinner at the Hilton Inn.

Proctor, one of the nation's outstanding young administrators, served as president of A&T from 1960 until 1964. He also formerly served as director of the Peace Corps in Nigeria, associate director of the United States Peace Corps, president of Virginia Union University and as administrative officer at the University of Wisconsin. He is pastor of Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem.

Gibbs served as president of A&T from 1956 until 1960, and gained accreditation for A&T by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Dowdy became president of A&T in 1964, and has been responsible for dramatic changes in curriculum, faculty development, capital improvements and the achieving of national accreditation by four of the university's academic segments. He is presently serving as president of the National Association of State Universities and La-2-Grant Colleges.

During Dowdy's administration, the university gained more than $19 million in capital improvements and the number of doctorates on the staff increased from 26 to 44 percent.

Reservations for the dinner may be secured from the Office of Development and University Relations in the Dudley Building.

M.I.T. Host Bennett Students

GREENSBORO -- Since spring 1970, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has enrolled black students from a consortium of seven southern black colleges in a one or two semester student exchange program. The program is sponsored by the Department of Physics and funded by the federal Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Among this year's four students are Doreleena A. Sammons, of Doylestown, Pa., a junior pre-medicine student and Juliette Walker, of Georgetown, S.C., a senior Biology student.

The program offers a year of intensive scientific study and research to students seeking to go into advanced research and teaching.

Juliette describes the experience as a "foot-in-the-door-opportunity". She admits that at first it was necessary to adjust to a large, high-paced University, but that the challenge was "well worth it."

The director of the program is Dr. Victor Fields of Hampton Institute and the faculty coordinator is M.I.T.'s Dr. Charles E.

remainder of the operation. Most of the radio staff belong to Shaw's work-study program and receive an hourly wage of $2.40. Volunteers comprise the remainder of the approximately 30 staff members.

"Students get totally skeptical of producing things that don't go anywhere", Keiber said. "The station is an outlet for their production."

FM. Hosts for the program were Delores Ramsey and J.C. Futrell who are Radio, T.V., and Film majors at Shaw.

"We must give our children a sense of pride in being black. The glory of our past and the dignity of our present must lead the way to the power of our future."
