Differences In Candidates Like Night And Day

Reprint of "Black Prospectives" Written by Carl T. Rowan Sponsored by The Chrysler Corporation

Important elections will soon take place all across this nation. And the crucial question is how many of you adults who listen to this program are going to vote.

I know. You're still nursing that silly notion that your one vote doesn't matter. Or maybe you have two white candidates for the Senate or the House and you still figure one white guy is like another.

It was that kind of dumb thinking that gave the presidency to Richard Nixon in 1968. That bit of unthinking irresponsibility cost black Americans dearly and it threw this whole nation into crisis.

What you may not realize is that although Nixon no longer is President, his influence lingers on -- and will be felt throughout the lifetime of a lot of people who listen to this program.

Richard Nixon appointed more men and women to federal judgeships than any other president. Nixon named 220 judges to the federal bench, including four of the nine members of the Supreme Court. These are people appointed for life who will enforce the laws and interpret the Constitution as it applies to you and me.

Thus the quality of justice in America for as far ahead as you can see will be determined largely by men chosen by the first president in our history to leave office tarred with scandal.

Everybody understands the importance of these judgeships. What you may not be aware of is that Nixon appointees now dominate 12 federal regulatory agencies that make crucial decisions and rulings affecting the daily lives of just about every American.

On the day he resigned, Richard Nixon had named every single member of eight of these important regulatory groups. I refer to the Civil Aeronautics Board, which controls your plane fares; the Federal Communications Commission, which controls the TV and radio stations; the Federal Power Commission, which decides how high your light bill is; the National Labor Relations Board, which influences the well-being of your union, the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is supposed to protect Americans from stock manipulators; the Consumer Product Safety Commission, which is supposed to prevent you from being ripped off by unscrupulous businessmen.

The Nixon people who control these agencies don't go out with Nixon. They are appointed for terms expiring in 1978, 1979 -- and in the case of the Federal Reserve Board, as late as 1988.

If you had it to do all over again in that 1868 race between Nixon and Hubert Humphrey, would you still say that your vote didn't matter? Would you still say that one white candidate is just like another?
