Three Schools For The Deaf To Open

RALEIGH—North Carolina's three residential schools for the deaf will open this fall with an enrollment of 1,087 deaf and hard-of-hearing children and over $787,000 in federal grants. The schools are a division of the N. C. Department of Human Resources.

Opening August 25, the N. C. School for the Deaf (NCS) in Morganton will enroll 563 students. This school offers the state's only high school for the deaf as well as preschool through eighth grade.

The Eastern N.C. School for the Deaf in Wilson will have 341 students in preschool through eighth grade classes. The school will open August 24 with a teaching staff of 61.

The Central N.C. School for the Deaf will begin September 14 on a new $5 million campus in Greensboro. The school will enroll 185 children and have a teaching staff of 38.

NCS in Morganton will utilize over $455,000 in federal grants-applications. These include an Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) Title III grant for $106,150 which will be used for dance, drama, music and art programs.

In addition to ESEA Title III, other federal programs supplementing the regular curriculum are: two library grants; ESEA Title I, offering an intensive and specially designed curriculum for the multiply impaired; a National Defense Education Act Title III for education media equipment; and an Occupation Education grant for vocational programs.

RALEIGH—Governor Jim Holshouser, Honorary Chairman of the Grand Week of Golf, named a 29-member Honorary Committee for Handicapped Children of North Carolina to promote advance sales of tickets to the World Open Golf Tournament to be held September 11-14 in Pinehurst. Proceeds from the Tournament will go to Parents and Professionals of Handicapped Children, Inc., a non-profit statewide charity.

Lieutenant Governor James B. Hunt, Jr., will serve as vice-chairman of the Honorary Committee.

PPHC consists of groups and individuals throughout North Carolina committed to promoting services for handicapped persons with special emphasis on equal educational opportunities, recreation, job opportunities, and community-based support services.

Among the groups and individuals benefiting from the proceeds are statewide associations for retarded citizens, learning disabilities, emotionally troubled children, autistic children, developmental disabilities centers, and epilepsy.

In addition, such local organizations as the Moore County Children's Center, Richmond County Developmental Day Care Center, Open Door Day Care Center of Pinehurst, and the St. Andrews Presbyterian College Chapter of the National Paraplegia Foundation will receive some of the proceeds.

The Governor said that the Committee members would be contacting golf fans in industries, businesses, civic organizations and other groups throughout the State to solicit their support of the World Open Golf Tournament and handicapped North Carolinians through the purchase of advance tickets.

Only those tickets purchased prior to September 1 will benefit handicapped children. Those wishing to order tickets should write the World Open Office, Box 4000, Pinehurst,

A&T Awarded $128,000

GREENSBORO—A&T State University has been awarded a $128,000 grant from the Governor's Highway Safety Program to assist the university in the expansion of its driver's and safety education programs.

Notification of the award was received by Dr. Isaac Barnett, director of the driver's and safety education center at A&T.

"These funds originated from the U. S. Department of Transportation's effort to reduce traffic and safety problems of the nation," said Barnett. "The grant will enable us to expand our offerings on both the undergraduate and graduate levels."

He said the A&T funds will be used for additional teachers, equipment and for supporting additional courses on campus and in the five off-campus centers currently operated by the university.

A&T, which has the only master's program in driver's and safety education in the state, has off-campus centers in Charlotte, Concord, Moore County, Durham and at Gaston Community College. An additional center will be opened soon in Wadesboro.

Barnett said in 1972, teachers of driver's and safety education were required to have only two semester hours of training in the area. "But now, thanks to the improvement program of the state," said Barnett, "teachers must have the equivalent of a major in the area."

A&T's first undergraduate majors in driver's and safety education will be enrolled in August. Barnett said the curriculum will include courses in general safety, alcohol and drug education, traffic laws, administration and supervision, traffic engineering and occupational safety and health.

had a booth set up with an eager representative to talk about his own company. The center booth was occupied by Mr. Reginald Cannon, owner of University Ford Co. of Chapel Hill. Mr. Cannon has been in business for only a short time but states that sales are well ahead of his predictions. His company offers Ford auto parts, service and even a little gas station for customers.

Clyde Foust, owner of Foust Photo Supplies, Asheboro, offers cameras, film, bulbs and other unique photo supplies. Mr. Foust comments that he went job-hunting when he came out of the Air Force in 1964 at a photo supply shop. He was rejected with the comment "we don't need another janitor." Now he is the owner of his own shop.

LeRoy Walker of Promotions Ltd., promotes business for large companies. He started out from scratch by writing to businesses asking them if he could sell their products. Now, after one year in business he says he is getting good response from different businesses and sells many different products.

Hannah's Jewelry of Warrenton, N.C., has been operating for two years under the ownership of Hannah Canaday. The job training she had in New York and the help from People's National Bank has made her the successful wholesale distribu-

1040 Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I plan on moving soon. Can I deduct my moving expenses?

A. To deduct your moving expenses: 1) you must have moved because you went to work for a new employer or were transferred to a new place of work; 2) the distance from your new place of work to your old residence must be 50 miles farther than the distance from your old place of work to your old residence; 3) you must work at least 39 weeks during the 12 month period following the move.

You can deduct travel expenses (including meals and lodging) and the cost of moving household goods and personal effects from your old residence to your new residence. You can deduct up to $2500 for the cost of house hunting, temporary quarters and selling your old house, with a $1000 limit on house hunting and temporary quarters deductions. Obtain Publication 521, "Tax Information on Moving Expenses", available free from your Internal Revenue office, for more details on the subject.

Q. My employer has attached my salary to pay for some of my outstanding debts. Is the attached amount considered income?

A. Yes. Amounts of attached or garnished salary are income and must be reported on your tax return. The amounts are constructively received by you, that is, they are credited to your account even though you do not have physical possession of them.

Q. How long do I have to keep records I used to prepare tax returns for previous years?

A. You are required by law to keep records that will enable you to complete an accurate tax return. Records that support an item of income or a deduction must be retained until the statute of limitations on the tax return expires. Usually these records may be discarded three years from the date the return was due or filed or two years from the day the tax was paid, whichever comes later.

Records of transactions relating to the basis of property should be kept as long as they are material in determining the basis of the original or replacement property. An example of this would be the purchase of a home.

All Stainless, Inc. of Boston is one of the few out-of-state participants. Eugene Roundtree, the president, has stayed in business for 23 years by selling anything that is made of stainless steel to large manufacturers. Some of his customers include R.J. Reynolds, Newport Paper Co., and Great Northern Paper Co.

Lemuel Johnson of D-ZINE Advertising has a sure thing going by designing outdoor billboards. He also makes artistic designs for license plates and just about anything else that designs can be placed on. Mr. Johnson is a former commercial artist at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and is a former art director of Associated Posters of Winston-Salem. When he left Associated Posters, five years ago, he decided to go into business for himself.

Other participants included Dudley's Barber Supply, owned by Mr. Joseph Dudley; Greensboro National Bank; Public Storage and Warehousing, and other local and out-of-state businesses.
