Bennett College And the War Effort

The participation of Bennett College in the defense effort includes a number of activities. The campus family here is taking part in civilian programs wherever possible, and, in addition, has worked out some special contributions of its own to the victory program.

As far back as December, students and faculty members registered with the local Citizens Defense Volunteer Organization, offering their services for first aid and disaster relief, as canteen workers, guards, air raid wardens, and in any other capacities for which they might be found fitted. In December, also, we urged the purchase of Defense Stamps as an investment against the post-war depression and they are still for sale at several points on the campus. Recently, the freshman class conducted an intensive campaign to promote the sale of defense stamps and bonds.

In regard to curriculum, we instituted in January a course in the Prevention and Emergency Care of Injuries, designed especially for students interested in first aid as a preparation for civilian defense. We are also providing our students with all the authentic information we can obtain on new job openings for women as a result of the war. In view of possible widespread vocational dislocation, we are helping them to prepare for secondary or alternate occupations in addition to the vocation of their major interest.

We do not believe, however, that there is enough information available, yet, on changed occupational opportunities for women to justify sweeping changes in our course offerings. Therefore, we are not accelerating or revising the curriculum to any great extent, but are continuing to emphasize those subjects which it seems likely will be of importance throughout the duration and afterwards—such as nutrition, home-making, consumer education, and related fields of study.

I believe that it is in these latter areas in particular that we are making our greatest contribution to the victory program, for we realize so definitely that a battle must be won on the home front against malnutrition, family disorganization, and civilian demoralization in general. We are doing everything we can, at Bennett, to provide information, study materials, and inspiration matter not only for our students, but for our neighbors in the community, in order to help sustain a high level of morale and win this important victory behind the actual battle lines.

We have recently seen how badly consumer education materials are needed right now in the number of requests which flooded our publications office following the recent announcement of a bibliography of consumer materials in nutrition prepared by Dr. Alberta B. Turner, head of our Home Economics Division. Over one-half of the requests came from women who said that they were engaged in defense activities and that this was the reason they were especially interested in these materials.

This bibliography is still being circulated as a public service, and we are also trying to meet this need for consumer guidance through our weekly radio program in Consumer Education and through the distribution each week of a free Consumer Information Bulletin with helpful hints on how to spend wisely during the war.

Another project which we are planning now is our annual summer institute, which will take place from June 2 to July 13 this year, and which will center around the topics of child health and community leadership, with specific reference to national defense.

Finally, we believe at Bennett that spiritual resources need to be developed more than ever at a time like this, and so we are stressing the religious side of life as a strengthening bulwark against the postwar let-down. In addition to our weekly vespers services, to which the public is always invited, a program of a religious nature is broadcast from Bennett each Tuesday, and for the past 12 weeks, on Thursday evening, a program of music by the choir and talks by members of the faculty has sent out what we hope has been a message of spiritual cheer and encouragement to our neighbors.

Jonesboro Woman Given Sentence

SANFORD, March 30.—A sentence of from 10 to 20 years in state prison was imposed on Lucille deGroffenreid, Jonesboro Negro woman, Friday after she was convicted by a Lee county jury of second degree murder in the fatal slaying of Arlie Moore, Negro, 20-year-old, on the night of October 9, 1941. Appeal was taken and in default of a $2,000 bond the woman is in Lee county jail.

It was at a farewell party given by the woman at her home in Jonesboro for her husband, Leon deGroffenreid, who was going north to work, that Moore was fatally wounded with a butcher knife.

Beer Dealers Group To Meet Here In May

The annual meeting of the Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee will be held at the O. Henry hotel here Thursday, May 28.

The executive committee will meet at 10:30 a. m. and the general membership for luncheon and business sessions at 12:30 o'clock. It was announced yesterday by State Director Edgar H. Bain, of Goldsboro. Distributors and brewer representatives from all sections of the state will attend the one-day meeting.

The program includes a report by Bain and addresses by Bernard Lichtenberg and James R. Nicholson of the Brewing Industry foundation, sponsoring organization. Lichtenberg is president of the Institute of Public Relations, incorporated, and Nicholson, is director of the foundation's self-regulation program.

Chairman J. P. Price, of Greensboro, will preside at both sessions, and among the items of business will be the selection of distributor members of the executive committee.

Members of the executive committee are: David T. Gallo, Norfolk; C. M. Wright, Newark; Walter Bartlett, Norfolk; Fred C. Hitchcock, Greensboro; C. L. May, Newark, and W. J. Huster of Cincinnati, representing the brewers, and Price; J. W. Jackson, Wilmington; Ed S. Yarborough, Fayetteville; J. O. Angel, Asheville; Fred Mills, Wadesboro and R. J. Jenkins, Kinston, distributors. W. S. Burrus, Greensboro, is treasurer.

Tobacco Plant Prospects Good

Indications at the present time are that there will be an abundance of tobacco plants to set this year's record crop when transplanting time comes some six weeks or so hence. All seedbeds appear to be sprouting and growing in a very satisfactory manner, according to tobacco men.

What at one time seemed to be a serious, if not critical, situation with respect to planted cloth failed to materialize fully. Merchants received large stocks of the material in time to be of service to growers, and so far as known tobacco farmers generally were supplied.

Weather conditions have been favorable to germination, and most growers are anticipating a plentiful supply of plants. Setting in the growing fields will get under way around the first of May or shortly afterwards.

American grocers, butchers and others who sell goods by weight annually require more than 98,000 new computing scales, according to the census.
