Dean Warmoth T. Gibbs Of A&T Announces Plan For Benefit To Veterans

By C. A. IRVIN

A plan for cooperating with the government in providing educational benefits for veterans of World War II was announced today by Dean Warmoth T. Gibbs of the college of education and sciences of the Agricultural and Technical College of Greensboro, North Carolina. The recently enacted federal legislation known as the Servicemen's Adjustment Act of 1944, commonly known as the GI Bill of Rights, provides, among other things:

"For completing a general education interrupted by call to military service, or for vocational training.

"For special consideration in obtaining employment and readjustment for periods of unemployment.

"For federal aid in acquiring a home, farm or business."

Benefits are available to men and women who have served ninety days in the armed forces between September 16, 1940, and the termination of the war and hold honorable discharges, or were discharged be-or disability following any peacetime of service-incurred injury period of service.

The provision for resumption of interrupted general education is applicable to persons who were not over 25 years of age upon entering the service.

They may begin government financed training either in the continuation of an interrupted course of study or a refresher course, within two years after discharge, or after the end of the war, whichever is later.

A. & T's GI Program

"We are gearing our program," stated Dean Gibbs, "to treat returning veterans on a personal and individual basis, allowing each individual to carry on the work according to his ability, and to see that servicemen are not set apart intellectually or socially from the rest of the student body."

Without sacrificing essential standards, Dean Gibbs stated that the returning servicemen will be counseled with and given credit for demonstrated ability and achievement. These men, he stated, will be given opportunity to live on the campus and take their meals in the college dining hall and to enter freely into all extra-curricular activities.
