

A&T Aggies To Open Grid Season Saturday

Gearing the A. and T. college Aggies for one of the toughest grid schedules in their history with the opening game set for Saturday, September 30, against the strong Winston-Salem Teachers college eleven in the Memorial stadium, is the problem for the Aggies new mentor, Brennan L. King.

Early fall practice began Tuesday, September 5, with 16 men reporting for the first workout. Since this time candidates have been taken through hard and strenuous drills. "With the fine co-operation that the team is receiving from the administration, alumnae, and friends, and with the return of many outstanding players and a plenty of new material, it will be my aim," said Head Coach King today, "along with Associate Coach Karl Keyes, and Assistant Willis Powell, to turn out a team which will perpetuate the fighting spirit of Lt. Sam Bruce, one of A. and T.'s greatest athletes, who lost his life in Italy as a member of the 99th pursuit squadron."

Behind King's ambition to weld a strong eleven in the memory of his pal, the late Lt. Sam Bruce, lies a great human interest story. It goes back to the Garfield high school at Seattle, Wash., where the pair were schoolmates. After graduation, Bruce and King played five years of semi-professional football, three with the Italian Athletic club, of Seattle, and two with the Seattle Yellow Jackets. During this period the former emerged with an undefeated record, the latter won championship honors.

In 1939, Bruce and King entered A. and T. college as freshmen and roommates. Their decision to attend the North Carolina college, was too, singular because they were led to their decision by Homer Harris, the then Aggie coach, another graduate of the Garfield high school who earned his collegiate degree at the University of Iowa.

Bruce and King had ambitions to become coaches at the same college upon graduation but came the war, and Bruce had his collegiate training cut short in 1941. After completing his basic training, he became a member of the 99th pursuit squadron. He paid the supreme penalty December 7, 1943, the infamous Pearl Harbor day.

King became coach of Dudley high school, Greensboro, after graduation in 1943, from which position he comes to A. and T.

EQUALIZATION IN SALARY SEEN AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Good news to Woman's college faculty members at their first meeting held at dinner last night incidental to opening college for the new session was the declaration by W. D. Carmichael, Jr., controller of the consolidated University of North Carolina, that "some progress has been made" in equalization of pay between members of the faculty of this and the other two units of the university.

Better news was his prophecy that within another year the differential will have been wiped out and "actual equalization of salaries" which will have been effected. Question of the differential in salaries which make members of the faculty of the Chapel Hill unit the best paid in university family, those at State college in the middle bracket, and those at Woman's college here on the lowest rung of the financial ladder has been much to the fore in faculty discussion at the local college for the past year.

Educators among Negroes are wondering if the same will hold true for Negro teachers in state colleges.
