INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

CHRISTIANS AND THE COMMUNITY

Golden Text: We are God's fellow-workers.—1 Cor. 3:9

AL LOVER THE PLACE By Halford E. Luccock

BEGIN BY LOOKING at two common wrong ideas about the "services" of the church: 1. The time of the service—This advertisement of a church appeared in a newspaper: "During the summer the church service begins at 11 a. m. and is all over by 12 noon." Of course we all know what the advertisement meant. But the words suggest more—something that is often too tragically true. Sometimes the service does end completely at noon. No further service is rendered to the community. In truth the real service of a church to its community begins when the worship in the sanctuary is over. That should not be the end but the beginning. The church has services, but its service begins when the people who have worshiped carry into the life of the community the ideals and motives that have been taught in the building.

2. The Mistake About Place. Our ideas of church work center too largely on things done within the walls of the church building. All too often "church work" means only those things done in the building—teaching in the church school, serving on committees, preparing church suppers, ushering. These have an important place in the life and work of the church. All honor to those who do these things! They have a real part in the kingdom of God. But they are not the only kinds of church work. There is the work that is done by the members of the church outside the building—work for the betterment of the community.

It might be a valuable thing to take a new kind of church census. Make a list of the work members of the church are doing for the benefit of the community, including work done in and through other organizations and institutions. One person, for instance, is serving on the governing board of a hospital. Another is giving time to the Red Cross. Another is helping in a community-chest campaign. Such a list would help the members get a clearer picture of the services rendered by the church to the community.

A stranger in a town asked another person, "Where is the Methodist church?" He got an unexpected answer, for the one who was asked the question replied: "Oh, if you mean the building, that is at the corner of Main and Market streets; but if you mean the church itself, it is all over the place." That answer was a high tribute to that particular church, for it meant that the members of the church were at work 'all over the place.'

One of the great differences between the world in which Jesus lived and our world is that with us cases of desperate need are hidden, whereas in Judea they were spread out on the road for everyone to see. If we see stricken men—stricken by disease or misfortune or injustice—we must get off the beaten track to see them. If we do not, we pass by on the other side, just as cruelly as the callous priest or the Levite.

1. Part of the church's service will be in physical ministry. Of course, this will not be to the extent that was true centuries ago, when practically all means of physical help, hospitals (such as they were), and homes for the aged were under the direct management of the churches. But the human power to serve in these institutions should include numbers drawn from the church's membership.

2. One growing means of ministry is counseling. There is a tremendous need for skilled friendship. Ministers are increasingly engaged in giving help to individuals in the practical management of life. There is need for many. Not that they will try to do the work of a psychiatrist (one who deals with abnormal conditions), but they extend wise and supporting friendly interest.

3. One great means of community service that a church ought to render is to inspire and support public opinion, which will be a force for making changes in our ways of living together—changes that will make for a more humane and Christian order of life. Large parts of the Church did magnificent service of this sort in creating and strengthening the opinion that demanded that human slavery must be ended. Multitudes within the church are patiently and forcefully building up the opinion that that sum of all stupidities and barbarisms—war—must be superseded by an organization of nations on a basis of mutual protection and law.

The world needs a new mind. The church must help to bring the mind of Christ into the mind of the world.

Subject: Recommendation

To: Whom it may concern

1. I have known Dellie L. Boger for a period of fifteen months all of which time he served under me as first sergeant of the 488th Amphibian Truck Company. He was not only responsible for the administrative and other duties normally assigned first sergeants but his ability for organization and getting things done, sometimes even under combat conditions, has helped tremendously in making the 488th one of the outstanding units of its kind. His counsel and advice on many problems were always in the interest of those he served. Despite many offers from commanders of higher echelons, he stuck to his old outfit. He could have had a commission if he so desired.

2. He is extremely intelligent and capable and it has been an honor to have served with him. If I had the opportunity to choose any of the first sergeants I have come in contact with, my choice would be him without hesitation.

3. He has served his country well and has proven himself a credit to the army, and his outfit and his people.

4. I recommend him highly in any endeavor of his own choice with faith that he shall always be an asset to anyone fortunate enough to have his services.

THE VOICE OF THE FUTURE OUTLOOK QUOTING RECOMMENDATIONS OF PROFESSOR D. L. BOGER

We, the Dudleyites, faculty, patriotic good Christian citizens and the members of St. Matthews church, of which Professor D. L. Boger was a member, expected nothing else any better stated from such a loyal Christian character of which D. L. Boger exhibited at his home town.

The editor of the Future Outlook observed very carefully the fine Christian contribution that Professor Boger contributed to his church during the past year. He ranked second as contributing the highest amount of finance to his church, and never a month passed that his name was not called with his church dues.

Therefore a man, who has traveled with the armed forces, and remembered his Christian duties at home, as Professor D. L. Boger, we would not expect any better remarks coming from Capt. M. W. Galante, Headquarters, 23D TC Amphibian Truck Battalion.

We only hope that we have one-third the citizens, white or black, could have this type of recommendation without being asked for.

Mr. Harden E. Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Parks were married Friday evening at Asheville, N. C. He was married to Miss Frances Smith of Washington, D. C., where they will reside. He was recently discharged from the armed forces after serving 4 years.
