Sunday School Lesson

picture of life in eighteenth-century England can be found anywhere. How much more this is true of the Gospels! The parables of the Samaritan traveler, the wise and foolish bridesmaids, the conspiring tenants of the vineyard, the lost sheep, the lost son — all tell us about real life in the first century. But they also tell us about real life as we know it today.

Who does not know a "fast operator" like the crafty steward, who could turn any liability into an asset? Can we not imagine the poor woman who swept under every piece of furniture till at last she found her lost coin?

The Parables Today

How can we understand the parables today and avoid distorting their meaning by interpreting them to suit ourselves or by picking up the wrong clue to their meaning? Several guidelines may be suggested.

1. We need to try to find out the actual situation in which Jesus told the parable. Each one was spoken at a particular time and place. Was the parable spoken to his friends or to his enemies? Are there clues as to whether the parable came in the early ministry in Galilee or in the latter days in Jerusalem?
