Treated Cotton Seed Returns Big Dividends

Treating cotton seed before planting them was worth $2,200,000 to North Carolina farmers in 1937, according to Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist at State College.
 The practice of treating cotton seed with ethyl mercury chloride dust, or two per cent ceresan as it is better known, was little used in this State prior to 1934.
 However, Dr. Shaw said, beginning in 1934 there has been a yearly increase in the adoption of this practice among cotton farmers of the State. That year 2,000 acres were planted with treated seed. By 1937 the figure had jumped to 200,000 acres.
 "It is anticipated that another increase will be seen this year," Dr. Shaw stated, "since a goal of 600,000 acres has been set. In order to reach this figure, it will be necessary to plant approximately 60 per cent of the cotton acreage with treated seed."
 The extension program on cotton seed treatment in North Carolina has now been underway for two years, Dr. Shaw explained. During this period, considerable data and experience on the subject have been accumulated.
 A total of 143 result demonstrations scattered throughout the cotton-growing areas have been completed. All of the tests were conducted in essentially the same manner.
 Results indicated that the treated seed for outyielded the untreated seed, the difference being 247 pounds of seed cotton per acre in 1936 and 267 pounds per acre in 1937.
 Dr. Shaw figured that the average gross returns per acre from seed treatment, which costs only 25 cents was $13.05 in 1936 and $11.27 in 1937.

 Prince Edward Island is the smallest Canadian province.

At least 99.99 of all marbles manufactured in the United States are made of glass.
 Lace handkerchiefs are offered at $150 each by a London store.
 Land's End is the westernmost point of England.

At the present time, North Carolina growers buy annually almost 30,000 mules and 4,000 horses at a cost of $6,500,000 from outside the State. On January 1, 1936, the combined value of horses and mules was over $59,000,000, which was more than twice the combined value of all cattle, sheep, and swine on that date, Hostetler said.
 States east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio River raise but a very small proportion of their work animals. North Carolina is typical of most of these states. Most competent horsemen, fully acquainted with the situation, are of the opinion that the southeastern states will have to buy from 150,000 to 250,000 animals each year for a long time to come.
 The demand for mules is increasing, Hostetler said, especially the medium-sized cotton mule standing from 15 to 15 1/2 hands high, and weighing from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds.
 There is also some demand for a slightly larger mule from the tobacco-producing areas. In these counties, growers will pay more for mules standing around 15 3/4 hands high and weighing 1,200 pounds.

Davidson Debating Teams To Make Tours

Davidson, Feb. 8.—Many thousand miles will be covered by Davidson debating teams this winter.
 The first tour, the first of which starts February 22. Eleven teams of representative colleges will be met by Davidson squads in no-decision debates.
 The first tour covers the south. Emory University at Atlanta will be the first rivals, followed by Birmingham Southern at Birmingham, University of Florida at Gainesville, Fla., and the College of Charleston, Charleston, S. C. The two regulars and one alternate will travel 1,500 miles in eight to ten days.
 The western tour, beginning March 7, includes the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., Southwestern University at Memphis, Centre College at Danville, Ky., and a fourth college which has not yet been announced. The northern squad will journey to New Brunswick, N. J., March 21, to meet Rutgers College debaters. It will then oppose Swathmore, Swathmore, Pa., and Washington and Lee.
 The first debate of the season was a home match against Dartmouth this fall. Two other teams, Amherst and Hampden-Sydney, are scheduled to visit Davidson this fall.

Workstock Breeding Increases in State

North Carolina farmers are now keeping thousands of dollars at home each year by raising their own horses and mules, according to Earl H. Hostetler, professor of animal husbandry at State College.
 There has been a marked increase in the number of horse and mule colts bred and raised in this State within the past three years as farmers have become to depend less on Western states for their workstock supply.
 At the present time, North Carolina growers buy annually almost 30,000 mules and 4,000 horses at a cost of $6,500,000 from outside the State. On January 1, 1936, the combined value of horses and mules was over $59,000,000, which was more than twice the combined value of all cattle, sheep, and swine on that date, Hostetler said.

CHANGE OF LIFE

Raleigh, N. C. — Mrs. E. H. Simon, 33 S. Swain St., says: "At middle-life my nerves were bad. I could not eat or sleep and became weak. I took Dr. Pierce's Prescription and it stimulated my appetite and thus strengthened me; in no time I was enjoying life again." Buy it in liquid or tablets from your druggist. See how much calmer and stronger you feel after taking this tonic.
