TOM AND GEORGE

Tom: "George, a couple Scotchmen went in swimming, and each made the other a bet of a dollar that he could stay under water the longest; which one do you suppose won?"
George: "Neither; they were both probably drowned." It's not "tight" to try to get your money's worth when you replenish your furniture needs, but it is real economy when you try to get your money's worth.

Cooperative Selling Helps Hog Production

Eastern North Carolina farmers have sold $1,500,000 worth of hogs through their local cooperative marketing associations since January 1, 1937, said H. W. Taylor, of State College.

The 85,000 hogs sold in this way were shipped direct to the packers, who pay prevailing prices for the high quality pork obtained from most of the hogs.

Although packers made deductions for soft and oily pork, Taylor added, growers have lost comparatively little because most of the hogs were in good condition.

The cooperative marketing program sponsored by the State College extension service is designed not only to help growers sell their hogs to advantage, but also to encourage them to produce high quality hogs.

At the first of the year 1937, two cooperatively hog markets were functioning in Eastern Carolina. Growers were so pleased with the results that they have organized 13 more associations since that time.

The extension swine specialist and county farm agents assist growers in organizing and operating an association, but the farmers themselves control its policies, Taylor stated.

Local men have been trained to grade hogs on a basis of their general quality, and arrangements have been made with the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry to provide federal graders to determine whether the pork is hard, soft or oily.

Swine cannot be graded for soft or oily pork until slaughtered and cooled. Therefore, this work must be done at the packing houses, where the federal graders will be placed as soon as men have been trained to grade accurately.
