PICTURE WAS SUPT. B. N. BARNES

The picture in the last issue of The Herald was that of Supt. B. N. Barnes, and Mrs. E. W. Griffin was the first person to call phone number 167 (the Herald office phone) and identify this well-known citizen, so she is declared the winner of the year's subscription.

The Herald Editor was called out of bed by someone calling for Boyd Harrelson, Rural mail carrier, to identify the picture, but as he did not call the phone number specified he did not win. A total of 106 persons identified Supt. Barnes by the picture even though he was all "diked" out in an aviator's outfit. Capt. Moss retired from service as conductor for the Southern Railway in June of last year.

In 1879, before he had reached his seventeenth birthday, he began his railroad career, as truck laborer in his home town, Flowery Branch, Ga. He was soon made Section Foreman and other promotions followed until in 1889, he was made conductor on a passenger train and served in this capacity until his retirement nearly fifty years later. Much of this time was spent on trains from Charlotte, N. C., to Washington, D. C., and the remainder from Salisbury, N. C., to Atlanta, Ga.

He was popular among fellow railroad men and the traveling public. He was of a quiet, unassuming nature, caring little for public life but at all times interested in the advancement of civil and religious affairs. He was a devoted father and husband and spent the greater part of his time in their company when not at work.

Capt. Moss was the son of a Methodist minister and has been a member of Central Methodist church of this place for many years.

He is survived by his widow who was before marriage, Miss Mildred Allison, member of a prominent family of this section; four daughters, Mrs. Ralph Norchout of Acworth, Georgia, Mrs. Paul Neisler, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Jr., and Miss Mildred Moss, of Kings Mountain; two sons, Nick Moss and George Moss of Kings Mountain.

Washington Snapshots by JAMES PRESTON

(Opinions Expressed in This Column Are Not Necessarily the Views of This Newspaper.)

Inside Washington is thinking and talking about: A genial young man, Tommy Corcoran, known to the Capitol as "Tommy the Cork." He is an intimate White House adviser.

In a recent magazine article a veteran Washington correspondent, Henry M. Hyde, quoted Corcoran as having personally made this statement to him:

"The definition of private property in the United States must be changed. We hope to make this change gradually and without disorder."

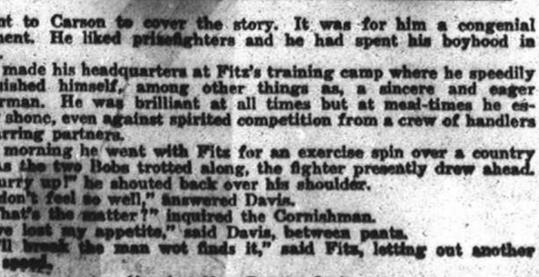

It is more than a political statement. What he is talking about would affect every man, woman and child, farmer, factory worker and storekeeper in America. A bloodless school.

A Burden for Some Stranger

By IRVIN S. COBB

BOB DAVIS was a sport-writer and fancier of pugilism. When Fitzsimmons was getting ready to fight Corbett for the heavy-weight championship in 1897, Davis, as staff correspondent for a big city paper was sent to Carson to cover the story. It was for him a congenial assignment. He liked prizefighters and he had spent his boyhood in Nevada.

He made his headquarters at Fitz's training camp where he speedily distinguished himself, among other things as, a sincere and eager trencherman. He was brilliant at all times but at meal-times he especially shone, even against spirited competition from a crew of handlers and sparring partners.
