

KRITICAL MOMENTS AND HOWLARIOUS SCOOPS

(By The Tattlers)

Woo woo again, we're back again, with some more of that dry stug which everyone liked so much last week. (Aw too). And we wonder what Julia will do now. What happened to the column, Julia? Or must you give it up now, that you've gone domestic on us? By the way, just how are you and Sounce and Gin doing? Or has Gin ceded the match to you? The love match, we mean.

And now for the coaches. They told us that they were coming back to K. M. with Mr. Little's father last Thursday night. And poor Dr. Little he must still be waiting on his "Buddy" to bring him home. Miss Morris are you still there? And what is itchy Betsy hears about this?

Jo Keeter and Betty P. are doing right well. And Ladd is getting a laugh a minute. The "Twins" called on Jo, Ernest got Betty, and they took Ladd along as chaperone. On boy?

Rachel has fallen. And it didn't take Parisian music and lights to get the desired effects. It's that new lad, Jimmie Darracott by name, and he's from South Carolina.

And now we turn Voice of Experience and hand out a few tips: Hazel and Jackie: when you take that trip to Tennessee, don't fall for any of the Mountaineers UP there. Hazel: Remember that you have a blonde right here in K. M. who has practically applied for a license.

Red Harper: Don't quit just because you lost "Homer." There are lots of girls in town who just love football heroes. Margaret Ratterree: Give us Columnists a break. You could if you would, we're sure. James D.: Look out fella, or you wont be footloose and fancy free long. Dean Tate: You're too ambitious, freshman. One gal is enough for you. Betty Patrick: Pick on somebody your own size. Mr. Moffat is two whole inches taller than you. And to the team: BEAT CHERRY VILLE!

THIS 'N THAT

Patterson Grove Section
Here it is Monday night, time to write this chatter and I have nothing unusual or interesting to write about.

Most of the folks in this section are about through picking cotton, have their potatoes taken up, and some have their corn pulled and their wheat drilled.

Just gossip: I heard a girl say that she once said that she would never marry but had found out that it was awfully easy to change one's mind. Could that mean that she has changed her mind and is thinking of saying, "I do" soon. H-m-m, I wonder!!

Heard a boy say that he was going to "sweet-talk" (that's his word not mine) his Dad into buying a new car this fall. E—I don't believe you Dad can be influenced by sweet-talk, but good-luck, anyway.

Miss Opal Freeman has returned to her home in Marion, N. C., after spending two weeks here with her cousin, Mildred Ledford.

Friends of Mr. J. K. Goforth will be sorry to hear that he has been very sick with flu for several days.

The intermediate boys and girls classes of the Patterson Grove Sunday School enjoyed a social given at the home of Willodene Thornburg Saturday night, Oct. 15.

Mr. and Mrs. La-Eon Thornburg and son, Danny of Shelby, were visitors of the Lee Thornburg's Sunday.

William Ware of Oak Grove section spent the week-end in this community.

November Vital For Poultry

Poultrymen should be happy during November. Early-hatched pullets should be in full production as that time and old hens carried over either for breeding purposes or for egg production should be coming out of the summer molt and adding their supply to the market eggs.

But poultrymen should think ahead of November profits, warns Prof. Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department of State College. Winter is approaching and it brings important problems. The mild winter of last year is no guarantee of another mild winter this year, he sagely points out. These are suggestions he makes.

Sufficient litter should be on hand; the windows of the poultry house should be intact and in good working order; drop curtains should be available where the open front house is used; nesting material for an ample number of nests should be available for the birds. Ventilation must be carefully watched from now on. The nights will become quite cold and direct drafts breaks of respiratory diseases, such as colds, roup and bronchitis. If driving rains enter the house, wet litter should be replaced as soon as practical, Prof. Dearstyne advises. On the birds may lead to serious out
