

AS IT GOES

By Virginia Logan

A great deal has been written at various times about looks. Essays, novels, and news articles all have taught us "how to win friends and influence people." Women without number have been immortalized in poetry and paint simply because they possessed sufficient muscular control to raise an eyebrow in a sophisticated manner. But seldom do we read of the common DIRTY LOOK. Have you ever thought of the advantages of a dirty look? It is probably one of the best time and labor-saving devices ever discovered by man. School teachers especially employ this method. From experience I can say that a mean look or a dirty look from an instructor makes a child want to go through the floor. This, however, saves the teacher's having to interrupt the entire class because of one mischievous student. As Benjamin Franklin once said: "Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversation." Would not it be better to merely "look ones thoughts" instead of voicing them? Looks are safer than words. Habits are funny. We do them, that's all, and do them without ever thinking. Habits are things which we do and shouldn't. Likewise is taking things and people for granted—we do, but we shouldn't. We promise ourselves that we'll do better, but the first thing we know is that we are back in the same old rut. According to my belief, if we all can just refrain from the habit of thinking only of self and can awaken to the idea that there is a fellow next door who might need a helping hand, life will be much more interesting. Life today, for tomorrow will be too late, or nearly so.

For some reason I've never liked to see something worthwhile go to absolute waste. Such seems to be happening to the tennis courts over at the ball park. When you go to the band drill tomorrow evening, please notice those courts and think of the good condition that they SHOULD be in. Then let's help clear them and start the balls rolling.
To a certain person in Charlotte: What is this about "always a bride's maid but never a bride?" Frankly, I don't believe the statement, do you? It can be proven false—why not try it?

List Requirements for Sound Recovery

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 17—(IPS) The essential elements for sound recovery and re-employment are so obvious that it "seems strange" they have not been considered by government, Phillip A. Benson, president of the American Bankers Association, declared here recently.
Mr. Benson listed among the essential elements, "tax modification, a recognition of the social usefulness of business, restoration of faith in the future and the release of the initiative and energies of all the people, the sum of whose initiative and energies makes up the American enterprise."
"What our people want is more wealth to divide," he said. "That is, more goods, more comfort, more luxuries, more steady employment more security. Those things can be provided only by healthy business and industry, by robust enterprise."
"It is almost superfluous to tell you that political economic management has not produced these evidences of wealth. It is encouraging to note that increasingly large numbers of people are coming to this realization and are willing again to give business the opportunity to perform its normal service to society."
