

Rural Lights Remodeled

More light is possible in many rural homes with the rapid growth of rural electric lines. Where now power is lighting farm homes, most of the users are installing modern fixtures.

But in homes where electricity has been available for some time, many farm families can remodel their existing lighting system without much expense to provide better light with less glare, says D. E. Jones, rural electrification specialist of the state college extension service.

much more light and better distributed light in homes than they did formerly. It is better for the eyes, they say, if all light in a room is well diffused, with a minimum of glare, and with no sharp contrast between lighted objects and their background.

Jones points out that possible improvements might include more convenient outlets and switches, more properly designed portable lamps, the shading of bare bulbs and more powerful light bulbs.

Double or triple convenience outlets in the living room increase the number of table or floor lamps the family can use for such close-seeing activities as reading, studying writing or sewing, the State College specialist declared. Similarly, extra outlets in bedrooms make it possible to have bureau and bedside lights and a reading in bed light.

Market Is Offered For Black Walnut Products

Americans consume fifty million dollars worth of nuts each year and about one-fifth of these are from wild trees in the forests. In other words, ten million dollars picked from the ground, not including the nuts consumed by thousands of farm families who have their own.

With this in view, R. W. Graeber, Extension forester at N. C. State College, suggests that North Carolina farm families, especially 4-H Club boys and girls, add the growing of black walnuts trees as a side line to their agricultural enterprises.

"No less than $150,000 worth of nuts are sold in North Carolina each year," he declared, and the possibilities for growing black walnut, both for nuts and lumber, are good. The market is far from saturated."

This is only one of the angles of 'tree farming' stressed by Graeber in his forestry educational program. Continuing, he says "Each year eight hundred million dollars are brought into the American bank account through the sale of forest products, making this one of the chief sources of our income. Six million people are directly or indirectly employed in our forests; and if it was not for wood, another 122 million or more would have a hard time making a satisfactory living.

The house we live in is usually made of wood, as well as the bed we sleep in, the chair we relax in, the table we eat at; and the stove we cook with consumes a lot of wood. Even when the newspaper arrives, it is printed on paper made of wood. Our shoes would be so stiff we couldn't bend if they were not treated with tannic acid, which is extracted from chestnut, hemlock, or oak bark.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

The cotton census report show that 6,265 bales of cotton were ginned in Cleveland county, N. C., from the crop of 1940 prior to Oct. 1, as compared with 32,218 bales for the crop of 1939.

N. C. Leads In Diphtheria Cases

RALEIGH. — North Carolina led the entire United States in the number of diphtheria cases reported during the week ending Sept. 28, according to official figures just received from Washington by Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer.

For North Carolina, with its 1940 population of 3,563,174, there were 46 cases reported during that week, as compared with 11 cases for New York, with its population of 13,379,662.

Cases reported from surrounding Southern States were as follows: Virginia 10; South Carolina 10; Georgia 18; and Tennessee 10.

There is, however, a brighter side to the picture, Dr. Reynolds pointed out, citing figures to show that during the corresponding week in 1937 there were 115. "But," he added, "with North Carolina's compulsory immunization law requiring inoculation of all infants during the first year of life and as a condition of admission to any school, public, parochial or private, now in full force and effect, the number of cases should have been practically nil. This law, he went on, became effective January 1, 1940.

Traffic accidents killed 498 persons the first eight months of 1940.
