Young Apple Trees Need To Be Pruned

There are two good reasons why young apple trees should be pruned says H. R. Niswonger, horticulturist of the N. C. State College Extension Service. They are: (1) To secure a strong frame work capable of supporting large crops of fruit with the least breakage of branches and (2) to influence the size at which young trees bear fruit.

One year trees set out this year, without side branches, should have one third to one fourth of their height removed in order to force out strong lateral branches for a frame work, Niswonger stated. On a one year or two year tree with lateral branches, it is wise to select several larger branches arising from the trunk to serve as the future frame work of the tree.

These laterals should be well distributed around the body of the tree, 6 to 8 inches apart. There are two central branches or leaders arising from near one point, one of these should be removed. All other side branches arising from the trunk should be removed, if the laterals and the leader or central branch are long and willowy. They should be cut back, immediately. The leader needs less pruning than the laterals.

The horticulturist reports that tests conducted at the Mountain Experiment Station showed that light pruning developed trees with a larger trunk diameter, and produced larger crops of apples at an early age. The increases in yields from light pruning as compared with heavy pruning ranged from one to 4.4 bushels per tree.

A small flock of 40 white Leghorn hens is returning Mrs. Yester Price of Marshall a net profit of slightly more than $15 a month, reports P. R. Elam, county agent of the State College Extension Service.

Farm Questions

Q.—What are the main points in getting the highest price for eggs?

A.—T. T. Brown, Extension poultry specialist of State College, has outlined a six-point program for selling quality eggs: (1) Grade for size and interior quality; (2) candle to remove stale eggs and ones with blood spots, and to separate according to interior quality; (3) make a least two grade sizes, and use extremely large, very small, and dirty eggs at home; (4) clean slightly dirty or stained eggs with emery cloth or damp cloth and soda, but never wash them; (5) use good cases with clean fillers and flats, or pack eggs in attractively labeled cartons; and (6) market eggs twice weekly.

Q.—What vegetables are adapted to cold frames?

A.—Such vegetables are cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, tomato, pepper and egg plant, started in shallow boxes in the house may be transferred to cold frames in order to develop stocky plants, and to harden them before setting in the garden says H. R. Niswonger. Extension horticulturist. Coldframes are also used as a seed bed in growing plants of the above vegetables for late season planting. The coldframe should be located in a sunny place, facing the South.

DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts.

The stomach should digest two kinds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chagrined—your stomach often pours out too much acid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain, or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all day.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes these little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the stomach fluids harmless. Follow the directions in no time and get your "Pep" back. Bell-ans is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.
